UPON

Several Passages of Scripture.

SECTION I.

HE only plaufible Arguments made use of, by any of those who have appeared in the Cause of Infidelity, have been grounded upon such Passages of Scripture as they thought liable to Objections, and incapable of being defended: The Discovery of the Inconsistencies and Improbabilities which appear'd in those Writings, that were generally ascrib'd to inspir'd Authors, gave them an Air of Triumph, and filled them with a very high Opinion of their superior Sagacity and Judgment. Nor have any Observations they could make upon the least Inaccuracies of Style or Expression, in those Writings, been omitted to be urg'd, in Diminution of their Authority. If Inconsistencies and Improbabilities, indeed, can be alledg'd against them, and no proper Evidence shall appear in Disproof of fuch a Charge, their high Claim to Divine Authority must be given up; for whatever is written by the Inspiration of God, must be consistent, must be probable, must be true. Therefore, unless it can be made appear that the Passages which are really liable to fuch Objections, have fuffer'd Alterations, and are not come down to us in the Manner they were deliver'd originally to Mankind, we should but with ill Success proceed afferting, and attempting to prove, That all Scripture is given by the Inspiration of God -To suppose that the Scriptures have suffer'd any Alterations, is indeed to allow, that we have not the Scriptures, given by the Inspiration of God, deliver'd down to us pure and uncorrupted. The Question then is, Whether the Introduction of any Alterations can probably be made appear? And, Whether, by fuch a Discovery, we can possibly regain the genuine Text, and Sense of fuch Passages, as they were originally deliver'd by the inspir'd Writers? And I must be bold to fay, That I am fully perfuaded, and hope fatisfactorily to prove, that God hath not left his Word without a sufficient Witness to testify the Authenticity thereof; particularly in those Pasfages which have given the greatest Grounds for Objections, upon Account of the Inconsistency or Improbability that may appear in the present Text.

As to the Inaccuracies of Style and Expression, which are urged as Arguments to disprove the Divine Inspiration of Scripture: they have frequently turned upon those who undertook to handle them, to their Shame; when Persons of superior Learning and Judgment had shewn that what they had look'd upon as Inaccuracies, were nothing less than

than the Strength and Beauty of Language: Of which many, most convincing Proofs are given in Blackwall's Sacred Classics. And it will appear, in the Course of these Remarks, that, for want in the Course of these Remarks, that, for want of Understanding, or duly attending to, the true Meaning of several Words and Phrases, in the Original Language of Scripture, many of those Expressions that may seem low, and unsuitable to the Subject, are used with the greatest Exactness and Propriety. — But, tho' the Style, and Manner of Writing used by the Sacred Penmen, could not be defended, in these Particulars, so well as they may be; yet, from thence could arise no real Objection against the Divine Inspiration of any Part of these Books; for if God, in general, dictated to his Prophets, what he would have communicated to the World; if he fo far superintended them by his holy Spirit, as to keep them free from Error, in what they delivered; their Writings must be acknowledged to be the Word of God, so far as to ascertain their Truth; tho' he should have left them at Liberty to express themselves in such Words and Phrases, as they were naturally, by him, enabled to do; without always suggesting to them in these Particulars. Whoever shall have any Doubts remaining, whether an Inspiration would be sufficient, without such a Suggestion, may be fully satisfied, by confulting Arch-Bishop Potter on this Subject in the 3d Volume of his Works, or Dr. Doddridge's Differtation, at the End of the 3d Volume of his Family Expositor. And it is scarcely to be imagined, nor can it be faid, with any Shew of Reason, that God should appoint such A 2 PerPersons to declare his Will to Mankind, who were not capable of expressing what was delivered unto them, in a proper Manner. So far we have a sufficient Assurance that the Scriptures were divulged to Mankind with all the genuine Marks of Divine Inspiration: not liable to any Kind of Error or Inconsistency, for want of a full Commission, given by God to his Prophets; nor to Obscurity or Incorrectness, for want of Ability in those Prophets to execute it. But,

SECTION II.

BSCURITY may now have arisen, upon some Parts of these Scriptures, by the Removal of that Light which those to whom they were first deliver'd, had, to affist them in the understanding thereof; and Incorrectness may have been introduced into them, by causes that may properly be called Natural: for,

When the Scriptures of the Old Testament were deliver'd to the Jews in their Native Language, they could be under no Dissiculty in understanding the true Import of the Words and Phrases made use of by the Prophets: The Customs and Ceremonies to which they so frequently allude, were what were well known to, and practis'd by all the People: And that Nation had so little Communication with others, (except the Egyptians, whose Customs are sometimes mentioned and alluded to by Moses) that there is scarcely any thing mentioned throughout the Scriptures, that was, in any Respect, soreign to those Persons for whose Use it was primarily intended. But, when these Scriptures are read by us, at this Distance of Time; when we are habituated to a Language, so different in its Idioms that of the Eastern People; when several of the Customs and Ceremonies referr'd to are unknown to us; and, when several of the appropriated Senses of the Words they made use of cannot be fully discover'd; no Wonder that these Writings appear to us, in some Measure, clouded with Obscurity: Several Resections upon the Particulars whereof will be made in the Sequel of these Remarks.

The Incorrectness that may now be observed in several Passages of Scripture, may be accounted for in such a Manner as not at all to derogate from lits Authority: Since the Alterations that may have been made in the Sacred Text, appear to proceed from the same Causes that have introduc'd them into all other antient Writings. A Revelation from God, to his Prophets, must be given, either by his distinctly declaring his Mind to them in an audible Manner, or, by his inspiring them with the Knowledge of his Will: But, in either Case, this Revelation must be convey'd to those Persons for whose Use it was intended, either by the verbal Declaration of the Prophet to fuch Persons, or by his Writing, or causing to be written, in a Language they well understood, the whole Import of such Revelation. - If it was to be deliver'd down to Persons that were to live in after Times, it could only be convey'd to them by fuch an Autographon, or by exact Copies thereof - And, if it was to be declar'd to People of different Nations and Languages, it could no otherwise be communicated to them than by a Tran-

Translation of the Original into a Language that was in common Use amongst them. — If the People of the Nation, in whose Language the Revelation was deliver'd, were many; if it was to be read in many different Places at the same Time, many Copies must be taken: And if a Transcriber should have made but one Mistake thro' the whole, that Copy could not be faid to be correct so as to lay any just Claim to the Title of Integrity. And it may be probably thought of all the MS. Copies of the Hebrew Scriptures, as is faid of all the Printed Editions of the English Bible, That none ever appeared without some literal Errors. But then, as the Errors of the Press, in modern Books, are look'd upon as Matters of no great Consequence, being so easily discover'd, and reform'd by a careful and judicious Reader, so the like Errors in a MS. Copy of the Hebrew Scriptures, would be look'd upon as Matters of as little Consequence to Jewish Readers, whilst it continued to be a living Language. But, to those who are only enabled to read and understand it by grammatical Rules, the Case is greatly different; the least Alteration in a Word may sometimes occasion a Difficulty, not easily to be surmounted, or cause an Obscurity we may not know how to remove. And,

If greater Errors than literal ones should have been committed by any Jewish Transcribers; if, in any Copies, thro' Haste or Carelessness, any Words or Sentences should have been omitted; or, if they should have added any Words, which they thought might be proper for the Illustration of the Text; or, if some Marginal Notes, which had been wrote upon some Copies, were in others, introduc'd into the Body of the Work; and, if any of these Copies should have been made use of in compiling that which was given to the Press, and is deliver'd to us as the genuine authentic Standard of the Original Hebrew Scriptures; the Consequence must be, That that Copy claims a Title to which it hath no just Pretence: And

The feveral Marks of Incorrectness that have been observed, and are easily discoverable, in the printed Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, entirely overthrow all the Arguments made use of by Buxtorf, and others who plead for the Integrity of this Text; and lay, unhappily, too just a Foundation for my

FIRST GENERAL REMARK.

"HAT the present Masorete Copy of the Old Testament is, in many places, different from the original Hebrew Text; that some Letters, and some Words, some Sentences, and some Paragraphs have been chang'd, some added and some omitted." But,

SECTION III.

HO' we cannot but greatly lament that fuch a Concession must be made, with Respect to a Copy, that for many Ages, was look'd upon as a faithful Transcript of the Writings of Moses and the Prophets, yet, we may, with some Pleasure, observe, that, from the Time that these Errors were begun to be taken Notice of, the ill Effects that might have arisen therefrom, have been,

been, in a great Measure, obviated, by a Discovery of their Causes; and a proper Use of those Helps that are still remaining to affist us in restoring the genuine Text, in those Places where it may have suffer'd any Alteration: so that nothing but a Wantonness of Mind, and Wickedness of Heart, can deduce and retain any Principles of Insidelity from Reasons grounded upon such Observations as these.

The Causes above assign'd for the Alterations that may, from Time to Time, have been introduc'd into the Hebrew Copies, will appear to every Person of Candor and Judgment, to be natural, and in some Measure, necessary: the very great Number of Copies that must have been taken for the Use of the Jewish Synagogues only, tho' we should not suppose them to have been in many private Hands, must make them liable to a variety of Errors: and all later Copies must be more incorrect than the former, should we suppose a Transcriber to endeavour strictly to attend to the Copy before him, and fo, retaining all the Errors that had been introduc'd into that; involuntarily add some others of his own. It is now 3200 Years from the Death of Moses; and 2200 from the suppos'd Time of settling the Canon of Scripture by Ezra: And it does not yet appear probable, that the World is now in Possession of any Copy above 1000 years Old. See Kennicott's Differtation. page 307. &c. And the Copy, the nearest in Conformity to that which is given us, in Print, as the authentic Standard of the Hebrew Scriptures, appears not to have been wrote fooner than A. D. 1400. Idem p. 300.

The

The Weakness of the Plea for the Integrity of the present Text, from its being so safely guarded by the Masoretic Hedge, will evidently appear to any one who shall read Bp. Walton's eighth Prolegomenon, before the English Polyglott; and as we are yet happily in Possession of some Hebrew MSS. that are free from all Masoretic Observations; and others, into which but few of them have been admitted; we may justly hope, from thence, to gain more Affistance towards ascertaining the genuine Text, than from the Labours of those who have bestow'd so much Pains to give a Sanction to every literal Mistake of the Transcribers, which they found in their Copies; witness the mighty Mysteries the Masoretic Rabbis have discover'd in those Letters which are irregularly written larger or smaller than they ought to be. On which fee the eighth Prolegomenon above mention'd, and Kennicott's Differtation Page 356, 407, and 495. from whence it appears that tho these are uniformly irregular in all the printed Copies, yet there are feveral MSS. still remaining in which these Letters are of equal Size with the others as they are likewise in the Samaritan Pentateuch.

What farther Assistance may be obtain'd from the Hebrew MSS. towards correcting the Errors in the present Text, we must wait in Hopes of seeing, from the Labours of some of those who may have the Opportunity of collating them. The various Readings of the Books of the New Testament, collected from Time to Time, are justly esteemed no small Treasure: and we should surely think our selves equally oblig'd to those who who should give us the Various Readings of the Books of the Old.

The antient Versions and Paraphrases which compose the Body of the Polyglott Bible, were doubtless, made from Hebrew Copies of much greater Antiquity than any that now remain: which must therefore necessarily be more correct than those which were made the Standard at the Time of Printing; as, from Time to Time, more, and greater Errors might be introduc'd into the later Copies - If we were to confider these Versions, as faithful Translations of the Hebrew Copies they were made from, we could not avoid being convinc'd that those Copies were different from that which is in Print: Since it will evidently appear, in the Course of these Remarks; that such Translations must be made from Words different, both in Form and Sense, from what we now find in the Hebrew Scriptures. - The Additions found in several Parts of these Translations to what is now in Hebrew; and in other Places, the Omissions of Passages which are in the present Copies, are incontestible Proofs, that either, We are not to consider any of the Versions as a faithful Translation of the Original Hebrew Scriptures, or, that the present Hebrew Copies are widely different from the Original. — But, it must be confessed, that the Arguments in Favour of the Authenticity of the present Hebrew Text, are much stronger than any that can be brought in Support of the Fidelity of any of the Versions; or, at least, of any of the Copies which we now have of them: For, The Translations were, surely, equally with the Original, liable to the the Errors of Transcribers. — It will readily be allow'd, That no two different Languages what-ever have Words so similar in their appropriated Sense and Meaning, as fully to convey the Senti-ments of any Writer into a verbal Translation. And scarcely any one will suppose a Translator so perfectly to understand the full Import of every Word in a foreign Language, as to be capable of expressing the Ideas annex'd to each by a Paraphrase. — These Considerations, when they are duly weigh'd by Persons of Judgment and Candor, will shew how cautious we ought to be of presuming to alter the present Hebrew Text upon the Authority of any particular Version. But when, as it sometimes happens, all the Antient Versions appear to have been made from a Word much similar in its Form, or Sound, to that which we find in the present Hebrew, but of a very different Signification: and when the Sense required by the Context gives a Sanction to the Versions; it may not be Presumption to suppose the Word to have been differently written in the later Copies, from what it was in those antient ones these Versions were made from. The Similarity of fome of the Hebrew Letters is so great, as easily to occasion some Mistakes in Transcribing: and if, as it is generally thought, Copies were sometimes taken from Oral Tradition, that is, a Transcribe of the Professional Transfer in the Country of the Countr scriber might say of the Person who read unto him, as Baruch did of Jeremiah, " He pro-nounced all these Words unto me with his Mouth, and I wrote them with Ink in the Book:" as fome Words that are fimilar in their Sound, are form'd from the Connection of different Letters; tho' tho' a Transcriber might endeavour to be correct, he might yet write a wrong Word.

SECTION IV.

PON these general Remarks, the following particular ones on several Passages of Scripture are chiefly founded, which have been collected from Time to Time, but must not be publish'd without a proper Apology. It is herein allow'd that there are Changes, Additions, and Omissions to be discover'd in the present Hebrew Text of the Holy Scriptures: But this is no more than what appears to have been fully prov'd in Capellus's Critica Sacra, and the Writers who espous'd his Cause, against Buxtorf; it is what hath been remark'd by several Commentators upon particular. Passages: and shewn, I think, to the Satisfaction of all candid Judges in Mr. Kennicott's late Dissertation. And Father Houbigant, as I am informed, in his Hebrew Bible just publish'd, (which I have not had the Opportunity of feeing,) hath propos'd more Alterations in the present Text, than all the Authors who have taken this Subject into Confideration. And whence can arise any just Objections against proposing the Emendation of any faulty Passages; if, at the same Time, we can discover the Causes of the Corruptions that may have crept into the Text, and point out the Methods of reforming them? For then, at the same Time that we shew the Want of Correctness in the present Copies, we make it appear that the Scriptures were originally correct and confistent.

The Compiler of these Remarks is desirous not to be exceeded by any one, in a due Veneration for these Sacred Writings: and the Design of these Sheets is here avow'd to be, an Endeavour to remove those Prejudices which have arisen in the Minds of many unhappy Men, against their being the Oracles of Truth; by proving that the Objections made to the Veracity, or Correctness, of any Part thereof, are Objections not arising from the Writings of those who were the Penmen of the Sacred Books, but, from the Alterations that have been made in those Books, fince they delivered them, as the Word of God, with all the genuine Marks of Divine Authority. An Attempt of this Nature, therefore must be so far from invalidating the Authority of Scripture, that it must be the greatest Sanction to it, and will be the most probable Means of restoring a general Veneration for the Writings of Moses and the Prophets; as it will render the Foundation of Infidelity, grounded upon such Objections, unfirm, and unable to support the Superstructure.

The Discoveries and Arguments of the abovemention'd Writers upon this Subject, and of several others who have occasionally made Observations upon most of the Passages herein referr'd to, may, in some Measure, justly be thought to supersede the Necessity and Use of these Remarks: since, to those who are thoroughly conversant with the Critics and Commentators, but sew things may occur that they are not already appriz'd of. But, as they are here collected, and laid together in such a Method and Compass, that those who may not have the Opportunity of consulting fulting many Books, may with Little Trouble take a View of the Opinions of many learned Men, upon a great Variety of Passages; And as the Remarks here mention'd upon any particular Passage, may be so readily referr'd to, by the Index of the Texts of Scripture hereunto annexed; a Work of this Kind may not be altogether unacceptable. And, with this Apology, I proceed to the particular Remarks, digested under the several Heads mention'd in the Contents.

SECTION V.

HEN, and by whom, the Points were added to the Hebrew Text, is a Matter of no small Debate amongst the Learned. The fingular Opinion that they were coeval with the Language, is, I think, generally exploded. Had they been fo, it is scarcely probable that any Copies would have been taken without them: yet, the most antient Copies still remaining, have them not: and we are inform'd that the Transcripts made for the Use of the Jewish Synagogues, are without them. The most plausible Arguments in Defence of their Antiquity, were publish'd fome Years ago by Mr. Whitefield of Leverpool. He carries them up so high as, at least, to the Time of Ezra; but his Reasons for so doing, appear not to be fufficiently convincing. On the contrary, several Keris having been found neces-fary to reform the Cetib in the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, make it plainly demonstrable, that they were not inserted by Ezra, when, as it is supposed, he settled the Canon of Scripture, and wrote the Hebrew Copy in the Manner it is convey'd to us: For, tho' it may be readily allow'd, that he might find Mistakes in the other Books, and point them out by the Keris, yet it cannot well be imagin'd that he should put them to the Books of his own composing.

Mr. Whitefield argues, that the Keris must be added after the Points were in use, because, upon the Words that are incorrect in the Cetib, the Points are such as are necessary to be apply'd to the Keris; and therefore supposes that the Reform was made from the Points: He urges this with great Ingenuity, but without convincing Proofs: for the Points and the Keris still appear to me to be of the same Antiquity, whatever that be. And, fince it appears from Mr. Kennicott's Catalogue of the Hebrew MSS. that none of those, yet known to the publick, that appear to have been written above 700 Years ago, have either Points or Keris; we may, with the greatest Probability, conclude that there can nothing be produc'd to convince us that either the Points or the Keris were added to the Hebrew Text before A. D. 1000.

By whom, or where, the Points were formed, it would be useless particularly to enquire, unless there are more probable Accounts of those Matters than I have been able to meet with. We must therefore be content with observing that, when we speak of the Hebrew Text with the Points, we are well understood by calling it the Masorete Reading, tho' we are not able to ascertain who the Masorites or Traditionists were, that settled the present Standard of the Hebrew Scriptures—It must be allow'd that they have not bestow'd the great Pains they have taken, uselessly: They fettled, or found fettled, the grammatical Rules of the Language, and, according to those Rules, they pointed the several Words, so as not only to distinguish the Parts of Speech, but also to ascertain the feveral Conjugations, Moods, Tenfes, Numbers and Persons, in which they thought each was to be taken: So far, therefore, the Points are a Directory, not only for reading, but also for ascertaining the Import of the Words, in the Sense they understood them. And when the Masorites sound a Word irregular in its Form or Construction, they could not retain it, and point it according to grammatical Rules; and, therefore, affixing a Word in the Margin, which might compleat the Sense and the Connection, they put the Points belonging to that Word, under the faulty one which they found in the Copies before them; and which they would not alter, left, perhaps, they might fall under the curse of the Law, Deut. 4. 2. This accounts for the Conformity between the Keris and the Points; and makes it the more probable that they were together added to the Text. After they were affix'd to it, the Copies taken might be the less liable to Errors; but they could not fecure an Indefectibility to any: as will sufficiently appear from the List of various readings, given at the End of Van-Der Hooght's Bible.

The Keris, which are at least 793, and at most 1171, according to the different Editions, (see Walton's Proleg. VIII.) are, in general, very properly and judiciously inserted, and, probably, the Words of the Original Text: and would, surely, have been put into the Places of the faulty ones, had it not been for the Reason above mention'd. Some of the various Readings upon the Scriptures of the New Testament, are justly thought to be better entitled to a Place in the Text, than those Words which obtain'd Robert Stevens's Sanction. Many Remarks upon which Subject may be feen by refering to the Index of the 3d Vol. of Dr. Doddridge's Family Expositor, under the Article of Various Readings; And in his Notes on Gal. 4. 17. Heb. 10. 2, 23: and many other Places. And, as the Various Readings have been found to be of fuch great Affistance in the Illustration of these Books; and as the Keris give us a great Affistance, which we should otherwise have wanted in the Hebrew Scriptures; we cannot but judge that, a Collection of the several Various Readings of the MSS. that are still subsisting, may be the chief Help now wanting, and to be hoped for, towards a Correction of the Errors in the printed Hebrew Text.

It is probable that, before the Points were added to the Text, none of those Vowels were omitted which have frequently been since, by the Licence of Masoretic Rules. And when the Sound of the Vowel was supply'd by the Point, a Writer, for Expedition Sake, might be induc'd, to omit the Letter. Thus Gen. 1. 14. המאורות is written instead of, אורות והאורות for, אורות למאורות in the same א לאחרות for, המאורות and, in the next, המאורות The Letters, that are wanting here, are supply'd by the Points, and therefore the Pronunciation must be the same in an Hebrew Reader: That the Letters omitted were in the former Transcripts, seems evidently to appear from their being found in the Samaritan Text; a Treasure happily discover'd to Europe about 130 Years ago; justly held in high esteem; and largely spoken of by Bp. Walton, Proleg. XI. Du Pin Proleg. Ch. V. and Mr. Kenmicott, in many places. In this there are neither Points nor Keris; it is written in the antient Hebrew Characters, and, we may well suppose, agreeably to the antient Manner of writing, without omitting the Vowels - The Omission of the Jod above thirty Times in the 40th Ch. of Ezek. is very remarkable; and proves that it was design-edly made, in that Copy which was follow'd by the Masorites. And yet, we may observe, that there was no general Rule invariably follow'd by the Transcribers, with Respect to such Omissions; since, within the Compass of two Verses, we find the same Name written שאי and שאי זו. Chron. 24. 1, 2 — Instances of this Sort are innumerable; and plainly feem to have been occasion'd by the Introduction of the Points, since Mr. Kennicott hath observ'd, p. 516. that there are Copies still remaining, in which there are not the Omissions in the 40th Ch. of Ezek. above-mention'd. But,

SECTION VI.

ESIDES the Alterations that may have thus designedly been made in the Text, by giving it in a more contracted manner, for the Sake of Expedition; (and which could be of no ill Consequence to a Jewish Reader, when the Sound and Sense of the Words was ascertain'd, by regular Points;) Copies of the Hebrew Scriptures were liable to some material Errors, from the fimilar Forms of different Letters: for, without great Care and Attention, a Transcriber might either mistake a Letter, or write it so much like that of its similar Form, that those who read it, or transcrib'd his Copy, might mistake it. And if there were any such Mistakes in the Copies that were look'd upon as genuine by the Masorites, and therefore introduc'd into the printed Text: and if by fuch Mistakes, Words of a different Meaning from those that were in the original Text, and more antient Transcripts, have been substituted in their Places, the Ideas convey'd by fuch Words must be different from what was intended to be convey'd to the Reader. - A Faithful Translator must render the Word he finds in the Copy before him according to its usual Signification, and therefore whatever Mistakes of that Kind are in the printed Hebrew Text, must be transferr'd into all the Modern Versions. But there were Verfions made into feveral Languages, from Hebrew Copies much more antient than those which can be suppos'd to have come under the Inspection of the Masorites; from which Versions we have an incontestable Proof, that several Words, in the Hebrew Copies they were made from, had different Letters tho' much similar in Form to what we find at present; that the Change of these Letters much alter'd the Sense of the Words, and occasion'd those Versions to vary much from the modern ones - In what Sense the Word was originally given, the Context will frequently enable us to conclude: And where B 2

Reason pleads loudly in favour of that Word the Antients translated from, we may justly infer from their Versions, that the Word hath been since altered, and is faulty in the Masorete Copies.

I. Whether the Word was אחר or אחר Gen. 22.13? Whether it was only said in general, that Abraham saw a single Ram, or said, particularly, that he saw a Ram behind him, is not very material: But it may be observ'd, that, tho' the pre-fent Hebrew hath TIN in the Samaritan Copy it is אחר and appears to have been so in those Copies which all the antient Versions were made from, except the Vulgate. And, probably, had Behind him been intended to have been express'd, it would have been done by the Word אהריו

2. We read I Sam. 14. 21. That the Hebrews turned to be with the Israelites: which, how improbable soever it may appear, is the literal Version of the Hebrew: but, in the Greek Version we read that the Servants of the Philistines desert-ed, and came over to the Israelites. This Diffe-rence is evidently occasion'd by the Change of a fimilar Letter, עברי is Hebrews and עברי Servants. Here is no Proof, indeed, when or by whom עברי was chang'd into עברי. But it may be refer'd to the Reader's Judgment whether the Difference of the Sense doth not induce him to conclude that this Change hath been made. And, what then? Are the Scriptures imperfect? Have we not the Scripture of God's Prophets deliver'd down to us? Neither of these Consequences will hold; It may be faid, indeed, that the Masorete Copy is faulty; but that God hath not left his Word without a Witness, by preserving a Version which which points out to us, how this Passage was ori

nally written.

3. In the same Manner, it may be doubted whether Moses wrote העביר or העביר Gen. 47. 21. If the former, our Translation is right, " As for " the People he removed them to Cities from one "End of the Borders of Egypt, even to the other End thereof." But, if the latter, the true Sense of the Passage is, "As for the People he brought "them into Servitude in the Cities, &c." — Now, if we were at Liberty to judge from the Circumstances of the History only, we should find little or no Reason to think that Pharaoh would remove the Inhabitants of one City into another, in so extraordinary a Manner. The Inconveniencies attending such a Removal must be obvious to every one; and any politic, or good Ends it could answer, will be difficult to be affign'd. - That he brought them into Servitude, is not only evident from the general Tenor, but from the express Words of the History: for they said unto Joseph, "Buy us and our Land for Bread; and "we, and our Land will be Servants unto Pha"raoh." Upon which Joseph said unto them,
"Behold, I have bought you this Day, and your "Land, for Pharaoh;" and they said, "We "will be Pharaoh's Servants." Then he said,
"Lo, here is Seed for you, and ye shall sow The Land, y. 23. - Is not The Land he here mentions, the same which he had just before called your Land? The Same which he had bought of them for Pharaoh? And, does it not, therefore, appear that the Order was given for every Man to till and cultivate his own Land that he was before Ba in Possession of, without any Intimation of a Removal?

But, The Word in all the printed Copies, and the MSS. they were taken from is העביר. And when the Cities are spoken of, it is not faid בערים in the Cities, but לערים to Cities. - As to the former part of the Objection, it is in some mea-fure, obviated already: The Word might be in the original and antient Copies, and in later: And that it really was fo, will scarcely be doubted when we observe that, in the Samaritan Text the Word is העביר. That the Greek Translators render'd the Word before them κα]εδελωσα]o: And, That the Latin Version is, Subjecitque eam (i.e. Terram) Pharaoni, et cunctos Populos ejus. - As to the latter Part of the Objection, I need only observe, that it is well known to those who are much conversant in the Hebrew Language that לערים may properly be render'd in the Cities: And, that those who are less so, may be readily convinced of this by confulting Noldius's Particles under > No.18. And, it must be a Satisfaction to a pious and attentive Reader, to see that Mistakes of this Kind, (to which Transcribers would be frequently liable, thro' the Similarity of the Form of Letters,) may be thus discover'd, and the genuine Text restor'd.

4. In some Cases we may not be able so fully and clearly to determine which was the original Word, where we must be satisfied that Copies have varied thro' the Change of Similar Letters. Where we read Γειτον Ιβα. 31.1. The Greek Translators read καινίζεσθε, " Keep Silence before me O "Islands,"

And whether "Be ye renewed or restored, to me," may not seem more suitable to the Context in that Place I shall not take upon me to determine, but leave it to the Readers Judgment.

5. When a Remark is thus generally confirm'd by fome particular Instances, it may be apply'd as there may feem Occasion. Similar Letters may have been miswrote for each other; but we should be cautious in supposing that they have been so without Evidence sufficiently strong. By the Authority of the Points and Keri, we are told that is put into the Text instead of אסירי Gen.

39. 20. Which yet, I am inclinable to doubt, because it is אסורי in the Samaritan Text, in the Characters of which there is no Similitude between the Vau and the Jod to occasion a Mistake. But it will more than sufficiently appear, in the next Section, that not only the similar Letters have been frequently put for each other, but that also Letters that were no ways similar, have been put in the place of others, thro' carelessness or Inattention — Amongst those who have spoken of the Hebrew MSS. I have not seen it observed, that there are any Marks of the Writer's revising his Copy, and reforming those Mistakes which every. Writer is liable to make. Now, if this was the Case with the Transcribers of the Hebrew Text; if, when they had finished their Copies, they let them go out of their Hands without farther Care; we cannot be at all furpriz'd at finding a frequent want of Orthography: but must think it applies, liar Happiness, that none of the material Parts of Scripture, relating either to Duties or Doctrines, are want of Orthography: but must think it a pecuare affected by the Errors of Transcribers; and that so many of the Literal and Verbal Errors, which are so frequent, may be discover'd and reform'd, by the Samaritan Text, antient Copies, and antient Versions.

SECTION VII.

E may justly conclude that, with due Care and Attention, the Orthography of the proper Names mention'd in Scripture, might have been much better preserv'd than we find it to be. When a Person is writing Names, the Orthography whereof he is not well acquainted with, he must be more liable to make Mistakes in them than any other Words: But, when a Person is transcribing a Copy where the Names are properly written, it must be for Want of due Care, if he does not give them in the same Manner: And, if a Mistake should have inadvertently been made by a Transcriber, in any of those Names which are mention'd in other Places; it might readily have been reform'd by a careful Supervisor of the Copy. We can have no reason to doubt but that the Penmen of the Sacred Books wrotethe Names of the Persons they mention'd in a regular and uniform Manner: If then, a remarkable Want of Orthography and Uniformity in these shall appear in the present Copies of the Hebrew Text, it will be evident that, this hath been occafion'd thro' the Haste and Inaccuracy of former Transcribers, and the Negligence of later, in not reforming those Errors that must be so apparent; unless we may more probably impute it to their tion of adhering to their Copies, as far as their Haste and Inaccuracy would give them Leave. That this Superstition prevail'd among the Masorites is evident from the foregoing Obfervations; and it is known to have long and strongly prevail'd with Buxtorf and those others who have taken upon them to defend the Integrity of the Masorete Text; an Opinion, which, from the Instances I shall produce upon this Head, will appear altogether indefensible.

ו. In the same verse we have the same Name written מחייאל and מחייאל Gen. 4. 18. The Points direct the latter word to be read as the former; but the Masorites would not alter the saulty

Letter.

2. The Name VILL Gen. 10.28. is VILL Chro. 1.22. But from the Syriac and Arabic Versions it is written Obal in Chronicles; from whence we may conclude that, when those Versions were made the Name was uniformly written in both places.

3. שך Gen. 10.23. is משך ו Chro. 1. 17. but as we find Mosox in the 70 Version of Genesis, we may be satisfied that it was משך in the Antient

Hebrew Copies.

4. חרר Gen. 25. 15. is הרד 1. Chro. 1. 30. but finding הדר in the Samaritan Text, must convince us that it was so in the antient Hebrew Copies of Genefis.

- 5. 194 Gen. 36. 11. is 195 1. Chro. 1.36. but, as all the Translators appear to have read Tzepho in Genesis, and the Arabic in Chronicles also, that will determine us to conclude what the true Name was; and that it was regularly mention'd in both.
 - . 6. המרן . Gen. 36.26. המרן ו Chro. 1.41. but when

when we find Hamdan in the Samaritan Pentateuch, and the Arabic Version of Chronicles, we can be in very little doubt which was the proper Name, tho' the other Versions give Hamran, according to the faulty Copy, in Chronicles; which only proves that mistakes in the similar Letters were made in some more early Copies.

7. py Gen. 36.27. is py 1. Chro. 1.42. The fod was evidently put to the Name in Chronicles instead of the Vau; it was written, And Achan. But this Mistake was made so early that the Latin and Syriac Versions read And Jacan; tho the Greek and Arabic have it properly, And Achan.

- 8. We find the same Name written 'In' and 'In' thro' the Casual omission of the Vau, Exod. 4. 18. as appears from the Samaritan Text, in which there is no such omission. Yet it may be observed that the Greek hath twice Iogop in this verse.
- 9. אלידע 1. Chro. 3. 8. is בעלידע 14. 7. but as the Greek, Syriac and Arabic Versions have no ש we may conclude it hath been added since those Versions were made, by the Carelesness of some Transcriber.
- 10. ביורם 11. Sam. 8. 10. is ביורם 1. Chro. 18. 10. but the Syriac and Arabic Versions have Joram in Chronicles.
- וו. שובך 11. Sam. 10. 16. is שובך 1. Chro. 19. 16. but, as the Syriac and Arabic Versions have Shobach, we readily see where the mistake lies.
- 12. פלאסר 11. Kin. 15. 29. is פלאסר 1. Chro. 5.6. but as it is Pileser in the Greek, Syriac and Arabic Versions of Chronicles, we must be convinced.

vinc'd that the hath been improperly inferted 13. איזר ווער 1. Chro. 23. 10. is איזר א. 11. but the Greek and Latin Versions have Ziza in both Places.

14. ברארך 11. Kin. 20. 12. is מרארך Ifa. 39. 1. but the Greek, Syriac and Arabic Versions have Merodach in Kings.

15. שמה 1. Sam. 16.9. is שמה 11. Sam. 13. 3. And שמעא 1. Chro. 2. 13. Accordingly, in our Version we find this same Name written Shammah, Shimea and Shimma.

ירבעל Judg. 6.32. is ירבעל 11. Sam. 11.

21. The Greek and Latin Versions have Jerubbaal in Samuel. But, upon this Remark, it hath been judiciously observed, and kindly communicated to me, that this change of the Name might be both voluntary and proper, as מול בשת and בעל are words of the same Signification, Jer. 11. 13.

Hos. 9. 10. And that, in the same Manner אשבעל 11. Sam. 2.8. is אשבעל 1. Chro. 8. 33. and 9.39.

17. אוו 1. Sam. 8. 2. is יואל 1. Chro. 6.28. Here

17. אואר 1. Sam. 8. 2. 15 אואר 1. Chro. 6. 28. Here the Letters are not at all Similar; but the evident Cause of the Difference is, as Le Clerc hath observ'd, the Omission of the Name of Joel in Chronicles, and taking אוני which was to express The Second for a proper Name. The Syriac and Arabic Versions have from a perfect Copy, rightly render'd the Words "The first born Joel, and the Second Abiab."

18. It would be tedious to the Reader to enumerate any confiderable Number of the Mistakes that have been made in transcribing the the proper Names. The Instances already given thew shew that the Transcribers were greatly wanting in Care and Attention; and seem plainly to prove that, they wrote in great Haste, and did not revise their Copies. And yet, at the same Time that we cannot but see, and acknowledge these mistakes, we are so happy as to find that very many of them are, even now, capable of being reform'd, and the Original Text undoubtedly restor'd, from the clear Evidence of the Samaritan Text, and the antient Versions. — It will not be wonder'd at, that in every Instance, we may not have the same full and satisfactory Proofs of what was the original Text, where, thro' the Errors of the Transcribers, we find Variations. Yet we shall seldom sail of sufficient evidence that the original Text was entirely correct and consistent. An Account of the Sons of Simeon is given in two different Ways. Gen. 46. 10. and 1 Chro. 4.24.

ימואל, ימין, אחר יכין, צחר, שאול Gen. ימואל, ימין, אחר יכין, צחר עמואל. ימין, --- יריב, זרח, שאול

The Versions of the Text in Chronicles must convince us that there were mistakes made in antient Copies: but, as the Samaritan Text literally agrees with the present Hebrew of Genesis, we can scarcely doubt but that we have there a true Account of the Number and the Names of the Sons of Simeon.

19. In one Chapter we have an Account of the Posterity of Levi by his Son Gershom, twice given; with what remarkable Variations the Reader will observe.

1: Chro. 6. 19.	i. Chro. 6.43.
Jr. 115-	לוי ז. אל
2. גרשום	נרשם 2.
לבני 3.	יחת 3-
4· אחי	שמעי4
זמה -5	זמה 5
6. אין אח	איתן .6
7. ערו	עירה 7.
זרח .8	זרח .8
יאתרי .9	אתני -9

There can be little Doubt but that the Genealogy was originally uniform in both places: and, it appears more than probable, that, in the first Catalogue, the Name of the Son of Gershom was omitted, and לבני put instead thereof from his Son; Since the Name of Gershom's Son, in the Syriac and Arabic Versions of v. 20. is said to be Nahath instead of Jahath, as we find it in the Second Catalogue. And here it may be observ'd, that if the Arabic Version was made from the Greek, according to the more general Opinion, it was from a Version or a Copy, different to what we have at present; Since it is evident that the as לבני Author of the present Greek Version read מבני as the third Name of the first Catalogue, as it is in the present Hebrew. This Remark may be apply'd to several of the beforemention'd Observations; and to such an innumerable Quantity of other Passages, that I cannot readily subscribe to the Opinion of the Arabic being a Version of the Septuagint.

ferv'd with more Care than the Names of Persons;

and

and the Inaccuracy of Transcribers, might be very largely exemplified by shewing how differently they are mention'd from what they were in the Original; but I shall content my self, and I hope sufficiently satisfy the Reader, with producing only one Instance, from two Catalogues of some of the Cities that were given to the Levites.

Josh. 21.11.	1. Chro. 6. 57.
דברון ז. לבנה 2-	חברון ו. לבנה 2.
ורגר -3	יתר 3.
אשתמוע 4. הלו 5.	4. אשתמע הילן
6. דבר 7. עון	6. דביר עשן 7
8. יטה	8.
ביתשמש 9. ביתשמש 10. גבעון	9. בית־שמש
גבע 11. ענתות 12.	גבע 11. עלמת 12.
r3. עלמון	ענתות יוז

As the Author of the Book of Chronicles, as well as Joshua, tells us that the Cities which he had enumerated, as given to the Levites were thirteen, we cannot doubt but the Catalogue was originally complete: and we may well conclude that the two Catalogues were consistent: Yet now, in the latter two of the Names are omitted; and only five of them written uniformly with those in Joshua. Tho' indeed the Differences are little material in No. 4, 5, 6, of the Catalogue, and the Observation of them may, in some measure, justify tify the Remark of Mr. Kennicott, upon the Name of David being written fometimes with, and fometimes without the ' and confirm that the Vowels were more frequently omitted in the more antient Books of Scripture, than in the later — The Transposition of the two Names in No. 12, 13. shews no want of Correctness in either Catalogue: And the omission of Juttab and Gibeon, must be imputed to the negligence of Transcribers, since both the Authors inform us that they had mention'd thirteen Cities.

These, and such like, Variations, in the proper Names, evidently arising from the Causes here assign'd, and in general, still capable of being discover'd, and the Text of being restor'd to its original Correctness, are undeniable Proofs — 1st. That the present Text is very far from being a perfect Transcript of the Original Scriptures -2dly. That some of these Mistakes were made in the Text before any of the Versions were taken that are now remaining; as, for Instance, there is no Account of the thirteen Cities, said to be mention'd in this Catalogue in Chronicles, in any of the Versions, but, two wanting in them all, as well as in the present Hebrew - 3dly. That different Hebrew Copies had different Mistakes in them; Since it is apparent from several of the foregoing Observations, and many other Passages, that some of the Translators had perfect Copies before them with Respect to some of those Texts, where others were led into Errors from the same fort of Corruptions in the Hebrew as we find at present. And 4thly. That the Preservation of the Samaritan Text, and the Antient Versions, collected in the Polyglotts, is of inestimable Benefit; as, thereby, the Corruptions in the present Text may not only so frequently be discover'd, but, at the same Time, the genuine Original Text, pre-serv'd in more antient Copies, is so plainly pointed out unto us.

SECTION VIII.

F Mistakes were so frequently made by Tran-scribers in Instances where the Orthography might have been generally preserv'd with a common Share of Care and Attention; we can have but little Room to think that there is an indefectible Correctness in the other Parts: and indeed, were we to expect it, we should find our selves greatly disappointed. But then, as we must discover Mistakes and Corruptions, in the Text, so, from the antient Versions, we frequently find sufficient Affistance to enable us to alter and reform them, fo as to shew the Text almost in its native purity: and more will, I hope, e'er long, rise up, from the Collation of such antient MSS. as are known to have unhappily long lain useless - Not that every Mistake of a Transcriber can properly be call'd, or ought to be confider'd as, a Corruption: If so, perhaps no Book, of any Consequence, either written or printed, ever appear'd without Corruptions: But, are the Errors of the Press call'd Corruptions? Or should the Consequence of a wandring Eye, or the Slip of the Pen be so severely censur'd? They are Faults indeed, but fuch, in general, as would be intuitively discoverable to an attentive Reader, if thoroughly acquainted with the Language; and fuch as would, probably, have generally been corrected in the feveral Copies, had it not been for a kind of Superstition that seems to have prevail'd upon all fewish Readers, not to alter the Copy, tho' they found it faulty. — In some Cases, indeed, it may be difficult to determine whether there might not be some difference in the manner of writing between the more antient and the later fews: for Instance

Instance,

I. Whether, as Tyl is above twenty Times put to express a young Woman in the Pentateuch, it is not according to antient usage? And whether, tho' the Word is certainly most properly in the other Books, it ought to be altered in the Pentateuch? may admit of a Dispute, which can be of no manner of use. For, with the Points, neither the Sound per Sense of this Word can be ther the Sound nor Sense of this Word can be ther the Sound nor Sense of this Word can be mistaken when 'tis met with in this Form; nor, without them, was it ever misunderstood, as far as I have observed, by those who made the Antient Versions. We should be somewhat surprized to see the Account of Hamor's Son circumcising himself expressed in this manner, "And the Girl deferred not to do the thing, Gen. 34. 19. &c. And yet I am well informed, that in old English, the word, Girl, is exactly expressive of the Hebrew Ty, and means a Young person of either Sex. But, if this was the Case with the antient Jewish Writers, and they wrote Ty; so indiscriminately; yet, in after Times, when they ceased to do so, a Transcriber would very properly write the Word Ty; when he found it of the Feminine Gender, as the Writers of the Samaritan Text Gender, as the Writers of the Samaritan Text have done, in these twenty Instances. And no English

English Writer would now be justified in using Girl for a Young Person of the Male Sex, tho it might have that Signification according to antient use, and maidion hath that Signification, Mark 5. 40, 41.

2. It might be according to antient Custom, that מראשית was written instead of מרשית Deut.

11.12. and — 3. יום instead of אזין Prov. 17. 4.

and — 4. מון instead of האלה Gen. 19.8. and and — 5. האלה instead of האלה Gen. 19.8. and 26.3. But, if it was so, the Writers of the Sa-maritan Copy of the Pentateuch, surely did right, in giving the Letters according to the proper Orthography of the Language in their Times.

6. The frequent Insertion of the Feminine ארה She, instead of the Masculine אות He, and e contra, hath been observed to be peculiar to the Pentateuch by all Hebrew Readers; The Context, indeed, always shews the true Sense of the Word, and the Points direct the proper reading of it: But, if the Points were not an original part of the Language, they are not necessary: and it must be an odd kind of Superstition that should prevent a Transcriber from inserting the proper Letters that make the due Distinction, tho all the antient Copies should have agreed in giving them in that irregular Manner we find them; which Mr. Kennicott informs us they do not, p. 356. And the Samaritan Text gives us the Letters as they ought to be.

Literal errors of this Sort are of little Confequence, where they do not obscure the Sense of the Passage, nor induce a Translator to give an improper Version of them. And what need only be consider'd, with Respect to these, is, Whether it would not be allowable, and more proper to insert the Letters, that the Orthography of the Hebrew Language evidently requires, than superstitionsly to retain those which are found in the present Copies, whether they were introduc'd into them thro' the Mistakes of Transcribers, or any antient Custom of writing the same Words in different Manners? But,

SECTION IX.

HERE Letters have been so chang'd, added, or omitted, as to missed the Translators from giving the true Sense of the Original, or to introduce Inconsistencies, Absurdities and Contradictions into the Sacred Text; these require a more diligent Attention: and surely demand a Reform, whenever we can discover, either from Antient Copies or Antient Versions, how the Words were originally written by the Inspir'd Penmen: And such Discoveries will make it appear, that the Scriptures were not originally liable to such Objections, as arise only from the Errors of some Transcribers, retain'd in the Maforite Text.

I. That promis found Pf. 16. 10. instead of particularly remark'd, and the Impropriety thereof shewn by Mr. Kennicott; and therefore I should not have mention'd it, had not his Observations upon it p. 218 and 496. and 554 been objected to; and Mr. Comings, in his Aufwer, had not alledg'd that the Word might properly be so written according to antient Custom. But, admitting this, which, indeed, he confirms by some proper Instances; Do not the Remarks in the foregoing Section, shew the propriety, if not the necessity, of now writing the Word Trom in the Singular Number, according to the present Orthography of the Language: since, tho' the Word is mark'd, as faulty by the Masorites; tho' it is render'd Singularly in all the Antient Versions, and all the Modern ones that I have seen; tho' it is particularly apply'd to Christ both by St. Peter and St. Paul, Asts 2.31.

13.35. yet whilst it continues in its present Form, it may occasion Men to be striving about Letters to no profit.

2. The 10th and the 18th Verses of Pf. 59. appear to have probably been a Repetition of the same Words "Unto thee, O my strength, will I "sing, for thou art the God of my Refuge." Some of the Antient Versions give Countenance to this supposition. And, if it was so, in the former y. my is now given, instead of my and my and my art of the supposition.

3. The Present Text, 2 Kin. 10. 1. tells us that Jehu sent Letters to the Rulers of Jezreel: but from the Context, we must be greatly inclin'd to think that the Letters were sent to the Rulers of Samaria; and, that it was originally so written will appear probable, from finding Samaria mention'd in the Greek Version. Le Clerc's conjecture, that the Rulers of Jezreel, who had the Care of Ahab's Children, might have been sled with them to Samaria, is render'd the more improbable by the Account we have of the Speed with which Jehu posted to Jezreel. And tho' it might have been originally, The Rulers of Israel, yet no Verfion fion gives Countenance to fuch a supposition. In the Vulgate we have ad optimates Civitatis. Supposing this to be the true Version of the Original, instead of יורעאר it must formerly have been אל "To the Rulers of the City, to the Elders" העיר and to them that brought up Ahab's Children." Changes and Transpositions of Letters more unaccountable than this, have been taken notice of in Section VII. And the Transpositions of the like fort remark'd by Mr. Kennicott are many.

4. It is justly and generally observ'd that after the mention of proper Names, which have been already consider'd, there is no particular wherein fo many Mistakes have been made by Transcribers as in Numbers: And some of them are of a very remarkable kind. Judiciously, no doubt, one of the Commentators upon Ahaziah's being said to be forty two Years old when he began to reign 2 Chro. 22.2. tho' his Father, whom he succeeded, is recorded to have liv'd only forty years chap. 2.20. says, Mendum bic si ullibi admitterem: and a fault there must certainly be, in one of the Texts; how occasion'd and how to be reform'd, is observed by Mr. Kennicott p. 97,528. which makes a further Remark unnecessary;

as also S. Upon Numb. 35. 4, 5. when אלף is evident.

ly put instead of אלפים. See p. 549. and
6. Upon 2 Sam. 24. 13. when feven is given instead of three. see p. 472. and 1 Chro. 21. 12.
7. In Judg. 14. 15. The Context leads us to think that the feventh is put instead of the fourth. When Samson's Companions could not unfold the meaning of his Riddle in three Days, they apply'd " C'3 to his Wife on the fourth &c. And this not only appears probable, but that it was originally fo written we can have very little doubt, when we now so find it in the Greek, Syriac, and Arabic Versions.

8. We read 2 Sam. 15.7. that after forty years Abfalom said unto the King &c. Now, the Context requires us to date the Beginning of these forty years either from Abfalom's return to Ferusalem, or, from his being admitted into the King's Presence: But it could not be forty years from either of those dates, when he spake unto the King upon this Occasion, since David reigned only forty years, and it was in the latter part of his reign that Absalom offended. — The Syriac and Arabic Versions plainly shew us whence the difficulty arises, which hath embarass'd the Thoughts of so many elaborate Commentators. — In the Copies which those Translators had before them Div years was written instead of the Plural, which requires to be render'd Forty.

9. Tho' the Antient Versions will frequently point out the Errors that are crept into the Hebrew Text, where an Alteration is evidently necessary, to complete the Sense of the Passage: Yet, without such necessity, we can scarcely, I think, be at Liberty to recede from the present Text upon their Authority only. E. G. The Antient Versions agree in giving the Name of Solomon 1 Kin. 2.28. where Absalom is mention'd in the present Hebrew. By turning to the Passage, the Reader will most readily see what Judgment he shall think proper to form upon this Representation.—But I must observe that the Alex. Copy of the 70. hath Absalom in this Place.

ro. The Agreement of several Versions with the present Hebrew will scarcely always be sufficient fully to justify the Integrity thereof. E.G. Tho' the Latin, Greek and Syriac Versions concur with the present Text in saying that David had prepared for the House of the Lord 100,000 Talents of Gold, and 1,000,000 Talents of Silver: 1 Chro. 22.14. yet, when we consider what an immense Sum this is, amounting, (if we reckon the Talent to contain 3000 Shekels, according to Bishop Cumberland's Tables,) to 461,171,8751. Sterling; we can scarcely avoid judging this Account to be incredible. — It is observable that when Josephus is giving an account of what David had prepared for the Construction of the Temple, he saith it was 10,000 Talents of Gold, and 100,000 Talents of Silver. Ant Lib Gold, and 100,000 Talents of Silver, Ant. Lib. 7. Cap. 11. only a tenth Part of the abovesaid Sum. - The Anabic Version of this Passage very remarkably renders it, 1000 Talents of Gold, and 1000 Talents of Silver; and plainly erroneously, fince we are inform'd Ch. 29.4. that to what David had prepared particularly for this purpose; he added, and gave out of his privy Purse 3000 Talents of Gold and 7000 Talents of Silver; which is confirm'd by the Latin and Greek Versions and carries no improbability along with 3 fions and carries no improbability along with it.

But what must we say to the Syriac and Arabic Versions, which tell us that this additional Sum was 1,000,000 Talents of Gold, and 2,000,000 Talents of Silver? Perhaps, upon the whole, the Reader may be inclined to think that, sometimes, the Numbers given by Josephus are more correct and authentic, than those we at 10,700 present C 4.

present find in the Text, or in any of the antient Versions.

SECTION X.

ORDS have not only been thus alter'd by Transcribers, so as to introduce Improbabilities and Inconsistencies, but they have also been omitted, so as to leave a manifest Desiciency in the Text.

- 1. The Keris are an evident proof of this, in some Places. E. G. 2 Kin. 19. 31. "The "Zeal of the Lord "---- will do this." The Keri supplies the Vacancy with צבאות "The "Zeal of the Lord of Hosts will do this."——And again y. 37. "Adrammelech and Sharezer ""---- smote him." The Keri supplys this Vacancy with בנין "Adrammelech and Sharezer "his Sons smote him." These words were doubtless in the Original, as they are render'd in all the antient Versions.
- 2. Gen. 4. 8. is one of those 25 or 28 verses in which the Masorites allow the Sense to be imperfect or elliptic. (See Walton's Proleg. VIII. 2.) Here the omission is at least properly supply'd in the Samaritan Text, "And Cain said unto Abel" his Brother, Let us go out into the Field." But Mr. Kennicott having taken this Passage into Consideration, p. 347. &c. makes it unnecessary for me farther to enlarge upon it here.
- 3. The Word אווא which is now wanting I Chro. 9. 41. was omitted by some early Transcriber, as appears by its not being taken Notice of by the Greek Translators; but it is in the Latin, Syriac, and Arabic Versions; and was in the Original ginal Hebrew; for the Genealogy is carry'd on from this Abaz 1.42. And he is mention'd as one of the Sons of Micab, Ch. 8. 35.

4: Five Sons of Shem are mentioned, Gen. 10. Nine are said to be the Sons of Shem: It may be alledged indeed, that, Grandsons are frequently called Sons, in Scripture; yet this appears not to be the intention of the Writer of Chronicles here; but the difference to have been occasioned by the Omission of ובני ארם. Since, in the Alex. Copy of the 70. the four last are expressly said to be the Sons of Aram, as in Genefis.

5. After the Canaanites Gen. 15.21. the Samaritan Text and the Greek Version add the Hittites. And Exod. 3.8, 17. they mention the Girgashites among the other Nations: And the Perizzites are added to them, Exod, 13.5. - 23.23, 28. and divers other Places, where there is no mention of them in the present Hebrew Text. - Now, whether these words were in the Original, or whether they have been added by the Transcribers of the Samaritan Text, it is not easy to determine. Several Passages in that Text, which are not in the Hebrew, are more generally thought to be Interpolations, as $E \times 0d.7.18.-8.4, 23.-9.5, 19.-10.6.$ &c. Yet there are, who plead for the Integrity of that Text in preference to the Hebrew. See, on this Subject, Kennicott's Dissertation, p. 337 and 384. And, as there is a Collation of the Hebrew and Samaritan Texts, in the last Volume of the English Polyglott, the Reader may the more readily pass his own Judgment upon these different Opinions - , in this was average the first

If these Instances are not sufficient to shew that Words have been omitted by the Carelessness of fome Transcribers, whose Copies have been followed by the Masorites; there are so many more Omissions pointed out in the above-mentioned Differtation, that it is needless to produce more on that Head.

SECTION XI.

A S words have been omitted by Transcribers, fo have they, in several Places, been added. The former might happen through Haste or Carelessness, but other Causes must be affigned for the Latter. A Transcriber might think a Word proper to be added; or, he might find a Word in the Margin of the Copy before him, which he, therefore, introduced into the Text: But, what I think the most probable way of accounting for such a number of additional Words as are now found in the Text; is, by concluding, as I have already observed we have great Reason to do, that the Transcribers did not revise their Copies, nor erase the Words that might have cafually been improperly written.

1. The Word ow might, as Words frequently are, be wrote twice over, 2 Sam. 6.2. That it was not originally fo, sufficiently appears from the Antient Versions, none of which give any Intimation of its being repeated.

2. Beth-el is not mentioned in the Greek Verfion 70/h. 8.17. nor can we reasonably think it was in the original Hebrew . For, had the Men of Beth-el pursued, as well as the Men of Ai, it would most probably have been said, that they left the Cities.

Cities, and not the City open: and we might well expect that both the Cities would have been taken on the same Day, which is contrary to the account here given: and they appear to be represented as taken at two different times, Josh. 12.9, 16.

It is needless to make more Remarks upon the Additions of particular Words, fince we shall so largely shew afterwards, that whole Sentences, Paragraphs and Passages, are now found in the Maforite Text, which were not in the Original: but it was thought proper gradually to trace the Errors of Transcribers, and the Faults of the Copy, from the less to the greater; and endeavour, by degrees, to remove the Prejudices of any of those who might have been possessed with an Opinion of the absolute Integrity of the present Text.-The Reader who is defirous to fee more Instances of this kind may observe the Interpolations that are remarked by Mr. Kennicott: I now proceed to shew.

SECTION XII.

THAT Sentences and Paragraphs have been changed, added and omitted, fo as to render the present Text much more different from the Original than we have yet represented it to be.

The great Importance of these Articles will justly require Proofs of the most convincing Kind to confirm Affertions, that may give an alarm to those who have looked upon every Word which they read in the Bible as an Oracle of Truth; and may feem to countenance the Opinion of those who have been so unhappy as to look upon the Scriptures in a different Light. But I hope a sufficient Apology is already provided, § IV. for any Remarks that shall be made upon these Heads. And if the Inconsistencies which have prejudiced the Minds of Unbelievers, shall appear to be occasioned by the Changes, Additions, or Omissions which are here pointed out, or, in any other such like Passages, and, if we can, with great Probability, shew what was the Original Text, and that it was regularly consistent, the Prejudices of those who are inclined to be candid, will, by this means be removed.

1. The remarkable Difference betwixt the Prophetic Expression of the Psalmist, Psal. 40.6. as we find it in the present Copies, and the Quotation of it by the Apostle, *Heb.*10.5. was impossible to be overlooked by any one who compared the Quotation with the Text referred to: And we cannot well wonder at the Embarassment which all the Commentators find themselves under, who go about to vindicate and explain the Hebrew Text: "Sacrifice and Meat Offering thou "didst not delight in, אונים כריח לי mine Ears "hast thou opened." And, after all the pains they have taken, none of them hath been able to discover the least propriety in the Antithesis of the latter part of the Sentence to the former: And this Difficulty was so great, that they seem to have overlooked some others, that must have attended the Vindication of the Text, in this View: for 1st. There is no conjunctive or disjunctive Particle between the former and latter part of the Sentence, to shew that any Antithesis was intend-ed, which is rarely, if ever omitted in the Hebrew, in such Cases, and which is regularly inserted in all the Versions. And 2dly. It would be difficult to prove that the Verb any where signifies to open, in the Sense they would understand it here: it signifies indeed to open a Pit, by diging, but how it can be properly applyed to the Ears I know not.

When the Apostle quotes this Passage of the Psalmist, he tells us, that Christ said by his Prophet, "Sacrifice and Meat Offering thou didst " not delight in, σωμα δε καθηθισω μοι, but a Body " hast thou prepared me, or provided for me." These are the express Words of the Greek Version in the Pfalm: and can we doubt then, whether the Words of the Prophet are here properly quoted, or were there properly translated? Especially, when internal Evidence must convince us that Words of this Import were written by the Sacred Penman: For, read the Sentence thus, the Antithesis is clear and express; the Words are plainly intelligible; and they fully illustrate both what went before and what comes after: "Many, "O Lord, are thy wonderful Works, and thy "Thoughts which are to us-ward; Sacrifice and "Meat Offering thou didst not delight in; but a "Body hast thou prepared me: Then said I, Lo! "I come, &c." i. e. Thy Thoughts, O Lord, have been intent upon the Redemption of Mankind; and though thou didst appoint Sacrifices and Offerings for thy People, yet as the Blood of Bulls and of Goats could not take away Sin, thou wast not satisfied therewith; but thou hast prepared me a Body, by the Sacrifice whereof a full, perfect and sufficient Attonement may be made for the Sins of the whole World; therefore I come to do thy will, O God. The

The Arabic and Ethiopic Versions agree with the Greek, in rendering the words of the Psalmist in the same manner: and it was, at least, a needless attempt in Bos and Grotius to endeavour to reform the Greek, in such a Manner as to make it correspondent to the present Hebrew, by putting ωτια or ακεσμα instead of σωμα: It would be much to our Satisfaction indeed, if we could difcover from what Hebrew Words these Translators have given us this Version: Mr. Pierce's Conjecture is, that instead of אונים it was originally אז גוא. Here are no greater Changes of Letters than we have seen in many other instances: and the Verb כרה undoubtedly fignifies To provide, or prepare, and might properly be render'd by κα αριζω. See 2 Kin. 6. 23.

It is a peculiar Happiness that amongst all the Passages which relate either to the Methods or means of Salvation, or which are prophetic of what the Messiah was to do, or to suffer for the Attainment of that great End, this is almost the only one that hath suffer'd any material Alteration: and in what manner this was deliver'd by the Prophet, the Apostle hath inform'd us. - I have before shewn §. IX. 1. that, by the same Authority, we are enabled to reform that Passage where the Holy Spirit spake of the Resurrection of Christ, saying, "Thou wilt not leave my Soul in "Hell, nor suffer thy Holy One to see Corruption. "So that, as I have observ'd §. I. we may justly

[&]quot; fay, that God hath not left his word without

[&]quot; a sufficient Witness of the Authenticity thereof,

[&]quot; in those Places that demand our more particu-

2. Several Alterations which other Passages have undergone, are but of little Importance, in Comparison to these: and if we cannot discover how they were originally written; this only confirms the Proof of the Inaccuracy of Transcribers, or Translators.

We are told 1 Kin. 8.65. that " Solomon held a "Feast seven Days, and seven Days, even sourteen Days, and on the eighth Day he sent away the People." An Account no ways consistent with that Propriety which is observable thro' the whole Scriptures. Yet all the antient Versions render this Passage in the same manner: except that, in the Vatican Copy of the 70. we have an Account very confistent with it self, and what we must be inclin'd to think is agreeable to the Original. "Solomon held a Feast seven Days; and on the eighth Day he sent away the People." And this I apprehend to be entirely confistent with what is faid 2 Chro. 7. 9, 10. That after Solomon had dedicated the Temple, he held the Feast of Tabernacles, which began on the fifteenth Day of the feventh Month, viz. Tizri or Ethanim, I Kin. 8. 2. and which is now mark'd as the first Day of that Feast in the Jewish Calendars. See Religious Ceremonies &c. Vol. 1. p. 224. And here we are particularly inform'd that on the 23d. Day of the seventh Month (which is also mark'd in those Calendars as the octave of the Feast of Tabernacles) he sent away the People into their Tents, glad and chearful upon this happy Occasion.

3. The Accounts of the Numbers said to be flain or taken in Battle are variously given in different Books and by different Translators.

In 2 Sam. 8. 3. And 1 Chro. 18.3. we have an Account of David's Victory over Hadadezer or Hadarezer, for so differently is the Name now spelt by the change of the 7 and 7. And the Numbers he took are thus given us in Samuel, in the Text and Versions.

1700 Horse-men, and 20000 Footmen. Heb.

Vulg. Chald.

1000 Chariots. 7000 Horse-men. 20000 Footmen Greek.

1700 Chariots and 20000 Footmen. Syr. and Arab.

In the Book of Chronicles, where this defeat is mention'd, the Hebrew and the Versions agree in saying, that David took 1000 Chariots 7000 Horsemen, and 20000 Footmen: except that, in the Syriac there is no mention of the Footmen — From this View it will evidently appear, that the Accounts in both the Books were originally confiftent with each other: and that the Greek Translators had a Copy of Samuel before them perfect, in this Particular. — Mr. Kennicott hath compar'd the Texts, p. 461. and endeavour'd to point out the Causes of the Mistakes that are now apparent: and whenever I speak of a Subject which he hath handled; I need only refer to him: for I am fatisfied that no person, whose Curiosity shall induce him to read these Remarks, will have omitted giving himself the Pleasure of perusing that ingenious and learned Differtation, which so much coincides with the first part of the Design of these Papers, in pointing out the Incorrectness of the present Hebrew Text.

4. In 2 Sam. 10. 18. and 1 Chro. 19, 18. we have an Account of the Defeat of the Syrians and the Numbers that were flain, in the same inconfistent manner as the former, and the variations in Samuel are found thus, 700 Chariots and 40000 Horsemen. Heb. Gr.

Lat. Chal.

700 Chariots and 4000 Horsemen. Syr. and Arab. In Chronicles it is thus represented.

7000 Chariots and 40000 Footmen. Heb. Gr.

Lat. Arab.

7000 Chariots and 4000 Footmen. Syriac. Here I should be inclinable to think that the Syriac and Arabic Versions, in Samuel, give us the best Account of what was the Original in these Passages, as they mention a great Number of Footmen besides Chariots and Horsemen, and may be nearly in Proportion to what was mention'd in the preceding Remark.

5. In 2 Sam. 24.9. where we have an Account of the Numbers of the Men of Ifrael and Judah, that Joah gave up to David, we are told that the Men of Ifrael were 800,000, and the Men of Judah 500,000. In this all the Versions agree with the Hebrew. But when this is mention'd 1 Chro. 21.5. the Men of Israel are said to be 1,100,000. and the Men of Judah 470,000. Except, that in the Arabic Version, the same Number is given here, as in Samuel. — The Reader may apply to the Commentators, who have expatiated largely upon this Subject.

6. The Price that David gave to Araunah, or Ornan for his Threshing-Floor whereon to build an Altar, is said to be 50 Shekels of Silver, 2 Sam. 24.24. Here again, all the Versions agree with the present Hebrew. But when this is mention'd 1 Chro. 21.25. the Price is faid to be 600 She-

kels of Gold, Heb. Gr. Lat. The Arabic is 200 Shekels of Gold: but the Syriac is 50 Shekels as in the other Passage: And I should imagine that where there is a general Concurrence of Evidence in one Place, a single Witness in the other, might be thought sufficient, to convince us that there was originally no disagreement in the Accounts of the Sacred Historians.

I need not produce more Instances to shew that Passages have been alter'd in the Hebrew Text: Nor can stronger Arguments well be expected, to prove that we have proper Means in our Hands of restoring the genuine Text, in several of those Places that have suffer'd Alterations, from the Carelessness of Transcribers, or been otherwise corrupted.

SECTION XIII.

MISSIONS, in the Hebrew Text, if they can plainly and fully be discover'd, are still a more flagrant Proof of the very great Carelessness of Transcribers: And, if in all the Copies which we have yet remaining, there are evident Marks of Omissions, whereby the Sense of Passages is left so defective, that no supposition of an Ellipsis will properly supply it; we have no other means of discovering what Words, or what sort of Words, have been omitted by the Transcribers, than from the antient Versions: But, if in those Versions we find the Sense complete, where it is now deficient in the Hebrew, we may justly from thence conclude, that the present Defect hath been occasion'd by the Haste or Carelessness of later Transcribers, who have omitted some Words that were in the Original and antient Copies.

1. In the Order given Josh. 13.7. We find this direction, "Divide this Land for an Inheritance unto the nine Tribes, add the Half Tribe of Manasseb; with whom the Reubenites and the "Gadites have received their Inheritance, which Moses gave them beyond fordan." — Here is a Manifest Inconsistency: — The Reubenites and the Gadites had indeed receiv'd their inheritance beyond Jordan, with one Half of the Tribe of Manasseh; see Numb. 32.33. Deut. 3.12. Josh. 22.
1. But it was not with that Half Tribe of Manasseb, who received their Inheritance with the Nine Tribes on the other side of Jordan. - In the Greek Version we read it thus; "Divide this Land for an Inheritance unto the nine Tribes, "and the half Tribe of Manasseh; from Jordan " unto the great Sea Westward shalt thou give it; "the great Sea shall be the Boundary. To the "Two Tribes, and to the Half Tribe of Manaf-" seb, Moses hath given beyond Jordan &c."-Now there can be little Doubt but that the 70 had a perfect Copy before them, and have properly translated the original Text of this Pasfage. Again, 2. In the Greek Version we read 1 Sam. 10.21.

that when the Person, whom the Lord had appointed to be King over Israel, was sought for by Lot, the Tribe of Benjamin was taken; out of that Tribe, the Family of Matri; and when that Family was called Man by Man, Saul the Son of Kish was distinguished by Lot.—
This is so agreeable to the Hebrew Idiom of Speech, and so exactly conformable to the Method of casting Lots, upon such an Occasion.

casion, (See Josh. 7. 16.) that tho' the present Hebrew omits the mentioning of the Family of Matri being called Man by Man; yet there is very little Reason to suspect that the Translators added these words, without finding them in the Copy they had before them.

3. The Greek and Latin Versions have a Clause at the End of the 13th Pfalm: "Yea, I will "praise the Name of the Lord most Highest." no Remains whereof are in the present Hebrew; and yet we can give no Account why the Translators should be induc'd to insert this Sentence, unless they had found it in their Hebrew

Copies.

4. There is another, of which the Hebrew makes no mention, at the End of the 14th Chapter of Numbers. "And they returned into the "Camp." This Clause is not very material, nor necessary to be supposed to have been in the original Hebrew: But, as it is now found in the Samaritan Text, and in the Greek Version; we may with great Probability conclude, that it was in the Original.

5. I am far from thinking that an additional Clause, in any of the Versions, will always justify the supposition of a Defect in the Hebrew; The Translators have undoubtedly very often taken the Liberty to make Additions, with a View to explain, or illustrate the Text: And whether The Lord had said to Joshua, that after Jacob and his Children went down into the Land of Egypt, "they became a great, numerous and mighty Nation?" Josh. 24.4. or,

6. Whether it was faid, that when Samfon had taken the Doors of the Gate of Gaza to the Top of the Hill, "he laid them there?" Judg. 16.13. or,

7. Whether the Plague of Mice was mention'd? 1 Sam. 6. 1. or,

8. Whether it was told to Samuel, not only, that Saul was gone to Gilgal, but also, that he was about to offer burnt Offerings? 1 Sam. 15. 12. Let the Reader, upon examining the Passages, and comparing them with the antient Versions, pass his own Judgment. But,

9. Sometimes the Evidences that arise in Proof of Omissions, in the Hebrew Text, are of such a Nature, that they almost necessarily preclude any Question, whether they ought to be admitted as entirely Decifive.

Six of the Pfalms are compos'd in an alphabetical Order, 25. 34. 111. 119. 145. divided into twenty two Portions, according to the Number of the Hebrew Letters. To find a Deficiency, then, in the Series of one of these Pfalms, must, surely, convince us, that some Part of it hath been omitted by the Transcribers. And this is really the Case in the last of these Psalms; where that Sentence which began with the Letter , is now wanting. This Omission was too obvious, not to be remark'd by several Commentators; especially, as the Latin, the Syriae, and the Arabic Versions, have here a Translation which was undoubtedly made from Copies of the Hebrew that were not herein defective; and from whence we may, with great Probabilty, conclude that the Words of the Passage omitted were these, "The "נאכן יהוה בכל דבריו וצריק בכל פעליו "The Lord is faithful in all his Words, and righteous D 3

"in all his Works;" which was the 14th Verse or Portion of this Psalm.

I may here take Occasion to observe, that in the 25th Psalm, the 18th verse, which according to the series of the Letters, ought to have begun with p begins with the whence we may conclude that a Word beginning with p has been dropped. Now what is to be done in order to recover this Word? We have no Versions old enough to supply us with it, nor have we any MSS. that we know of, so old as these Versions. What then is to be done in this Case? why, the only method we can have recourse to, is to look over all the words in the Hebrew Concordance under the Letter p. And here the Word p will present itself, which bids fairest to be the very word which has been dropped. This therefore let us substitute for it in Italicks, till some MSS. be found which may put it out of all doubt.

Tho' the Sentences contain'd in these Alphabetical Periods are of various Length, in different Psalms and Chapters, yet it hath been scarcely ever doubted but that they were all written according to the establish'd Rules of Hebrew Poetry: But, what those Rules were, none have yet been able to discover and declare in such a Manner, as to give entire Satisfaction, or obtain an universal assent to their Opinions. And this Discovery having been attempted to be made by men of so great Ability, Learning, and Judgment in Poetry, with no better success, must give us Reason to doubt, whether we shall ever be so happy as to have that Point clear'd up, which would so much contribute to the Illustration and Improvement of the Hebrew Text. — But, to return return to the Subject in Hand, and give another Instance of a large and almost unquestionable Omission in the Hebrew Text.

Instance of a large and almost unquestionable Omission in the Hebrew Text.

10. In Rom. 3. 13, St. Paul cites a Passage from the Scriptures of the old Testament in these Words; "Their Throat is an open Sepulchre; "with their Tongues they have deceived; the "Poisson of Asps is under their Lips; their Mouth is full of Cursing and Bitterness; their Feet are swift to shed Blood: Destruction and "Unhappiness are in their Ways, and the Way of Peace they have not known; there is no "Fear of God before their Eyes." — Now, in the printed Hebrew Copies, there is no such Passage to be met with. What must we say then? Did St. Paul quote, from the Scriptures of the Old Testament, what was not in those Scriptures? Does he say, "As it was written;" whereas it was not written? God forbid! Did St. Paul compose this Passage from unconnected Places, and different Books of Scripture; and therefore say, "As it is written? This is what those, who plead for the Integrity of the Hebrew Text, have been oblig'd to suppose, and affert: But this Manner of quoting is so different from that of our Saviour and his Apostles, in all the other Parts of the New Testament, that I cannot think there are Grounds suspicion of a Desect, in the Hebrew Bible, must have arisen in the Minds of many, upon this Occasion: and more than a Suspicion would readily be admitted by some of those who observ'd, that in the Vatican Copy of the Greek Version, and in the Vulgar Latin, this Passage was found in its full extent in the D 4.

5th and following Verses of the 14th Psalm: and they would be still the more confirm'd in this Opinion, upon taking Notice that the Apostle does not begin his Quotation at the 5th Verse, but at the 2d; and carries it on in the same Manner as we now find it in those Versions: from whence it is evident, that either those Versions were made from Hebrew Copies, in which this Passage was in the same state as we find it quoted; or, that the latter Part of it was added, either by the Translators, or by some Transcribers of the Verfions, in accommodation to the Quotation of the Apostle. Any Proof of the latter supposition, will scarcely be attempted: in the Alexandrian Copy, indeed, this Passage is wanting: from whence we may well conclude, that it was omitted in the Hebrew Copy from whence that Version was made: for I am very inclinable to think, that the Vatican and Alexandrian are Copies of two different Versions of the Hebrew Text; and whoever observes, that there is scarcely a Chapter in the whole Bible, wherein there are not different readings in these two Copies, and some of them of fuch a Nature, as cannot well otherwise be accounted for; will be ready to subscribe to this opinion; and be convinc'd, that in antient Times, the Hebrew Copies greatly differ'd from each other; and consequently, that some of them much varied from the Autographon of the sacred Penmen.

It is observable, that the Quotations in the New Testament appear to have been taken from the Greek Version, rather than from the original Hebrew; as the very Words of that Version are frequently made use of by the Apostles; particularly in this Passage, which is exactly the same, except that the preposition $v\pi o$ is not before $\tau \alpha$ $\chi e i \lambda \eta$ in the Vatican, but probably omitted thro' the Carelessness of the Transcriber. This must give the greatest Sanction possible to the Authority of this Version; and upon that Account I cannot scruple to conclude, that from hence we have as clear a Proof as can well be given, of a manifest and remarkable Omission in the present Hebrew Text, which appears to have been perfect, in this particular, at the Time when the Version was made. And this, added to the foregoing Observations, may be sufficient to justify the general Remark,— That there are several material Omissions in the present Masorete Text.

SECTION XIV.

HE Interpolations that shall appear to have been introduc'd into, or added to the original Sacred Text, must be ascrib'd to different Causes from those which we have assign'd for the other Mistakes or Corruptions which we find in it. — Interpolations could not be occasioned by haste or carelessness, or for want of a Revisal of the Copies; nor, indeed, could a Copy that was intended to be exact, well admit of them. Errors of other forts, such as are above-mention'd, they were all liable to, tho' they might intend to be exact: But, in taking a Copy, a Transcriber might aim at Improvement, or add such Notes, as he might think proper for the Illustration of the Text: and, in that case, it might be customary in former Times to put such Notes into the Text, and not into the Margin, as we now do. Or, what might be put into the Margin of one Copy, might might be inserted in the Text of that which was taken from it. And we may well judge, that a Jewish Reader or a Transcriber might be inclin'd to add fuch marginal Notes; fince there were feveral Books amongst them which treated upon the same Subjects as the Historical Books of the Old Testament, and which were held in very high Esteem, tho' they were not admitted into the Canon: The Books of Nathan, Iddo, Ahijah, Shemaiah and Jehu; the Book of the Wars of the Lord, and the Sayings of the Seers and others are spoken of, Numb. 21. 14. Josh. 10.13. 1 Sam. 10. 25. 2 Sam. 1. 18. 1 King. 4. 32. 1 Chro. 27. 24. 29.29. 2 Chro. 9. 29.—12.15.—20.34.—33.19. And it is neither improbable to suppose, nor improper to admit, that the Sacred Historians might fometimes refer to Books that were before written; and where they had not done it, a Transcriber, who was acquainted with a similar Passage in another Author of esteem, might judge it proper to mention it.

1. Of the first Sort I take Numb. 21. 14. to be, as it is probable that an authentic Account was kept of the Wars of the Lord, as here mention'd in the Hebrew, and all the Versions. But,

2. Whether the Book of Jasher, spoken of Josh. 10.13, was not introduc'd by a Transcriber, may admit a Doubt; fince there is no Intimation of any Reference to it in the Greek Version, nor in the Chaldee Paraphrase. That there was a Book called Sepher hajashar will not be doubted, as it is taken Notice of in all the Versions of 2 Sam.1.18. But whether those Words, in both these Places, really mean, the Book of Jasher, or, the Book of the upright one, or, the authentic Copy, I shall submit to the Reader's judgment: 'Tis only here mention'd, to observe, that there may be some probability of an Interpolation in the Hebrew Text, and that it is neither very material nor unaccountable.

3. Upon any other Supposition, we could not well account for the mention of the Return into the Camp at Gilgal, Josh. 10. 15. Joshua had set out of Gilgal to relieve Gibeon, and when he had met with fuch remarkable Success there, he proceeded to over-run the neighbouring Country; and after taking several Cities, we are told v. 43. That Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, to the Camp at Gilgal; the Words in the Hebrew Text are the very same $1.15; and $1.43. But there is not the least probability that it was so mention'd originally, verse 15. on the contrary, we are told 1. 21. "That after the total defeat of the five Kings, all the People returned to the Camp to Joshua at Makkedah in Peace. - From hence there are Grounds sufficient to induce us to conclude that these Words, " And Joshua returned &c. v. 15. are interpolated. And, how this Interpolation was occasion'd, we may offer a probable Conjecture. The Sentiment, and the two last Words of the Sentence in both $.14. and $.42. are exactly the fame נלחם לישראל : after which Words in the 42d v. a Transcriber might write the Words of y. 43. in the 15th: And then, ob-ferving his Error, return, and proceed to y. 16. &c: But, (according to what we have observ'd to have been a general Practice with the Jewish Writers,) neglecting to erafe, what he had thus improperly written, the Fault must be carry'd into the Copies from thence taken, and so continues to this Day.

— But these words are taken no Notice of in the Greek Version: from whence it is probable, that this mistake was not made, when that Version was taken, or, not in that Copy it was taken from.

4. For the same Reason we may conclude, that the 33d ½, of the 13th Ch. of Joshua was not in the Original, as it is not render'd by the 70. But that, singly, is too weak an Argument whereby to charge an Interpolation upon the Hebrew Text: for, tho' what is here said be unnecessary, as having been mention'd ½, 14. and several other Places; yet, as Repetitions are not uncommon, one might be made here, and omitted by the 70 Interpreters as superfluous.

5. No wonder the Commentators are so prolix and various in their Notes on 1 Sam. 13. 1. "Saul reigned one year, and when he had reigned two years over Israel &c." for it is, doubtless, an inextricable Difficulty, taking the Hebrew in its present State; for the literal Version of it is, "Saul was a year old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years over Israel:" compare 2 Kin. 16. 2.—18. 2.—21.1, 19.—22.1. &c.—I am inform'd, that there is a Fragment of a Greek Version of this Place, which saith, that Saul was 30 Years old; but in the common Editions of the 70, this verse is entirely omitted: If it was not in the Hebrew Copy before those Translators, it was necessary to omit it: and if it was there in it's present State, it was proper; because no rational Version could be given of it; And as there is no want of a proper Connection of the Parts of the History, when this is left out, there is the greatest Probability that these unaccountable Words, have some how unaccountably been admitted into the Text.

6. In the 22d Ch. of 1 Kin. four verses are omitted in the Vatican Copy; from $1.45. to $1.50. and, it may be thought, that they were not in the original Hebrew: because, omitting them, the Style is exactly conformable to the other Passages in this Book, where the last Actions, and Death of a King are spoken of. See 1 Kin. 16. 27. -24. 40.

2 Kin. 10. 34. -14. 28. -15. 21. -16.19. &c. Besides, what is here said, is not altogether consistent with the Account of Jehoshaphat's Designs, mention'd 2 Chro. 20. 35. &c.

7. In the 10th Ch. of Jeremiah, the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 10th verses are omitted in the Greek Versions: As are also the 10th and 11th verses of the 30th Chapter: As is one Half of the 33d Chapter, from the 13th verse: And from the 44th to the 50th verse of the 51st Chapter: And from the 27th to the 31st of the 52d. And, I should have mention'd, in their Place, the four first verses of the 17th Chapter. I presume not to say, or to give it as my Opinion, that these Passages are Interpolations in the Hebrew Copies: but, when speaking upon this Subject, thought it proper to lay them before the Reader, to give him an opportunity of examining what Grounds there may be for such an Opinion. But,

8. As we have taken notice of several Passages that carry evident Marks of Interpolation, I shall consider at large a part of David's History, which,

from

from this Cause, appears to me to be very incorrect and inconfistent. It is that contained in the 17th and 18th Chap. of the first Book of Sam. Where an account is given of David's coming to the Camp, when Goliab, the Champion of the Philistines, was giving a Defiance to all the Servants of Saul; - Of David's undertaking to fight with him; and of Saul's Conversation and Behaviour upon that Occasion. This Account is contained in 88 Verses, according to the present Division of the Hebrew; 39 of which appear to have been Interpolated, and others to have been so much altered, as to introduce such Inconsistencies as must surprise every careful and judicious Reader.

Had every Version of the Hebrew Text agreed to give us a Translation of this Passage, as we now find it; the attempts of clearing it from its Embarassments would have been attended with very great Difficulties; but, as in feveral other Cases before mentioned, so here, the providence of God feems to have so far secured the Credit of those, who were appointed to be the Penmen of the Oracles of Truth, that the Defence of their original Records may be undertaken upon good Grounds, and supported by sufficient Evidence. For, we are now, happily, in Possession of an Antient Version of these two Chapters, which appears to have been made from an Hebrew Copy which had none of those 39 Verses, which are here supposed to have been Interpolated; nor was fimilar to what we have at present, in those Places which are here supposed to have been altered. This Version is found in the Vatican Copy of the 70; which, whoever reads and confiders, will find the

the Accounts, there given, regular; confistent and probable. It will be proper, therefore, to examine the several Parts where such Alterations are supposed to have been made, in the Hebrew Text; in order to produce such other external or internal Evidence as shall be necessary to support the charge of Interpolation; which ought not to be laid merely upon the Authority of any fingle Version.

(1.) The first Passage, which is not translated in the Vatican Copy of the Greek Version, is, from the 11th to the 32d Verse of the 17th Chapter, wherein we have an Account, 1st, Of David's being fent to the Camp to visit his Brethren: 2dly, Of his Conversation with the Men of Israel, relating to Goliah's Challenge, and their informing him of the Premium Saul had offered to any one that should accept it and come off victorfous: 3 dly, Of Eliab's remarkable Behaviour to his Brother David, upon his making this Enquiry: and 4thly, Of Saul's being made acquainted with what David had faid upon this Occasion.

It is obvious to remark upon this Passage, 1st. that after David had been of fo much Service to the King, in causing the evil Spirit to depart from him: after its being recorded how greatly Saul loved him, and that he had made him his Armourbearer: after the King had fent to Jesse, to fignify his Intention of keeping his Son with him: all which are particularly mentioned, in the latter Part of the preceding Chapter: The account of his keeping his Father's Sheep, afterwards, and being sent to his Brethren upon this Occasion, must appear to be somewhat improbable.

that Saul had offered, to him who should conquer the Philistine, is not well consistent with the Accounts afterwards given; of which we shall have occasion to take particular Notice. 3dly. That Eliab's Behaviour, as here represented, is not only remarkable, but unaccountable and absurd. And 4thly. That the Enquiries of a young Man, who is not said to have declared any Intentions of accepting the Challenge of the Philistine, would scarcely have been related to the King.—But now, if this Passage be supposed to have been Interpolated, we must see how the Connection stands, upon its being omitted.

y. 11. "When Saul, and all Israel, heard these "Words of the Philistine, they were dismayed,

" and greatly afraid.

* y.32. "Then David said unto Saul, Let no "Man's Heart sail because of him; thy Servant

" will go and fight with this Philistine."

No Connection can be more proper: and, in this View, David is represented as being, at that time, an Attendant upon the King: and, when we had been told, just before, 16.21. That Saul had made him his Armour-bearer, we might justly expect to find him with him, when the Battle was set in Array. 17.2.— In this Connection, David is also represented, as fully answering the Character before given of him; "A mighty va-" liant Man, and a Man of War:" 16.18. and ready to fight with the Giant upon the first Proposal: (for, the Account of the Philistine's prefenting himself forty Days, is in the Passage here supposed to have been Interpolated, 17.16.) I shall shall leave it to the critical Hebrew Reader to make what particular Remarks he may think proper, in respect to the Style, and manner of Expression, in these 21 Verses, and let Jesse go for an old Man, amongst men, in the Days of Saul, &c.

(2.) The next Passage omitted in the Vatican Copy, is the 50th Verse of Chap. 17. which is a sort of a Recapitulation, that is entirely needless: the Sense is complete, and the Connection regular, without it. The Connection, in the Vatican Copy, stands thus;

y. 49. "The Philistine fell upon his Face to " the Earth.

y. 51. "And David ran and stood upon him,

" and took his Sword, &c."

When this is mentioned, was it at all necessary, was it at all proper, to say, in the preceding Verse, that there was no Sword in the Hand of David; after the particulars of his Accourrements had been given us in the 40th Verse? And when we are told in the 30th, That after he had girded on his Sword upon his Armour and assayed to go, finding them inconvenient, he put them off from him?

(3.) From the 54th Verse of the 17th Chap. to the 6th of the 18th, we have an Account, 1st. That when Saul saw David go forth against the Philistine, neither He, nor Abner, the Captain of the Host, knew who the young Man was. 2dly. That fonathan, Saul's Son, instantaneously conceived a violent Affection for him, loved him as his own Soul, and stript himself of all his Armour, and his Garments, to give them to David. And 3dly. That Saul set him over his Men of War. Accounts, which, when examined, will neither appear probable, nor confistent with the other Parts of this History. For 1st. I have already had Occasion to observe, that David's first introduction to Saul is represented to have been upon Account of his being a skilful Musician: and that he had fo far gained upon Saul's affections, that he had made him his Armour-Bearer, and advanced him to a Post, that required his frequent Attendance upon the King's Person: and 2dly. That Saul knew whose Son this youth was, because he had sent to Jesse, to let him know that his Son had found Favour in his Sight.—3dly. That Saul should so readily permit a Youth, that was unknown to him, to accept the Challenge of Goliab, and risque the Fate of all Israel upon his Success, according to the Terms the Giant had proposed, 17.9. will either not easily gain Credit, or will be looked upon as a remarkable instance of Rashness and Indifcretion in the King of Ifrael.—4thly. To suppose this to have been the first introduction of David to the King and Court, must make the Account here given of Jonathan's Affection to him, and his manner of expressing it, appear very extraordinary.—Admitting him to have been in the Family before; an Officer, in high Esteem with the King; and who had, upon other Occasions, shewn himself to be "a mighty valiant Man, "and prudent in Matters, and a comely Person, " and one favoured of the Lord;" as he is reprefented, 16.18. these shew the Grounds of Jonathan's Regard for him; and well account for that Affection of his towards David, mentioned in other Places, and in a different Manner. See 19.2. and and 20.17. - 5thly. How are we to understand those words, "And Saul set him over the Men of "War?" To take them in their full Extent, we must suppose the Command to be taken away from Abner, and David made Captain of the Host. But, on the contrary, we find Abner at Saul's Side, 20.25. and mentioned as still being Captain of the Host, 26.5. Besides, we are informed, that immediately upon the Return from the Slaughter of the Philistine, Saul conceived a Jealoufy against David, upon the Womens ascribing more Merit and Honour to him, than they had done to the King, 18.8 Is it therefore to be imagined, that he would, at that Time, invest him with fo much Power and Authority? On the contrary, we are told, 18.13. That "Saul removed "him from him, and made him Captain over a "Thousand." And, on the whole, I am perfwaded, that these nine Verses have been interpolated; there are no Traces of them in the Vatican Copy of the Greek Version; and, leaving them out, the Connection is entire, and the whole account altogether probable and confistent:

17.54. "And David took the Head of the "Philistine, and brought it to Jerusalem; and he

" put his Armour in his Tent.

18.6. And as they came, when David was "returned from the Slaughter of the Philistine, "the Women came out of all the Cities of Israel, "&c."

(4.) In the 9th Verse of the 18th Chap. we are told, that Saul eyed David from that Day and forward, expressed by the Word עון, no where else used in the Hebrew Language, in that Sense.—

In the 10th and 11th, That an evil Spirit came upon Saul, and enabled him to prophefy: that while David was playing, to disposses the evil Spirit, Saul cast a Javelin at him to smite him to the Wall: and that David avoided out of his Presence, twice. — And in the 12th, That the Lord was with David, and was departed from Saul. Now, either there was an antient Hebrew Copy, wherein there were no such Expressions as these; or, they were omitted by the Translator, or Transcriber, of the Greek, in the Vatican Copy: for there the Connection stands thus,

" unto David ten thousands, and to me they have

" ascribed but thousands.

12. " And Saul was afraid of David.

13. "Therefore Saul removed him from him; and made him Captain over a Thousand, &c."

Here the Connection is clear; and Saul's Conduct represented to be such as might naturally be expected. But, there would be some Difficulty in endeavouring to make it appear consistent; should we suppose that Saul, after he had made two Attempts to slay David, should immediately give him the Command of a thousand Men, or advance him to any Post of Honour. The Truth seems to be; That Saul had yet thrown no Javelin at him; nor did it, 'till after some other Attempts to destroyhim had proved ineffectual: [See 19.9.] And, That the antient and original Hebrew Copies contained no more than what we find translated in the Vatican.

(5.) The next Paragraph omitted in the Vatican Copy, is contained in the 17th, 18th, and 19th Verses

Verses of this Chapter. In which we have an Account, 1st. Of a Proposal made by Saul to David to give him his eldest Daughter Merab to Wife; and, at the same Time, encouraging him to Valour, in Hopes that he might fall by the Hands of the Philistines. 2dly. Of David's modestly declining the Honour of being the King's Son in Law. And 3dly. That, when this Marriage seemed, on all Parts, to be concluded upon, Merab was given to Adriel the Meholathite to Wife. - The Inconfistencies that must arise from supposing this, and the other Passages we have been examining, to be any part of the original Text, will be evident to every attentive Reader. For, 1st. We are told, 17.25. That, when Goliab had given a Defiance to the Men of Israel, Saul had offered to give his Daughter, with great Riches, to any one who should kill him, and take away the Reproach from Israel: And this is represented as one of the Motives, that induced David to undertake to fight with the Philistine. We might, therefore, justly have expected an account of the Celebration of those Nuptials, soon after David was returned victorious from the Slaughter of him. Here, no notice is taken of David's having any such Expectations; but that, when Saul offered him his Daughter, upon Motives unknown to David, the young Man was greatly surprised at the Proposal.—2dly. We are authentically informed, 18.20. That Michal, Saul's youngest Daughter, fell in Love with David; and that, when the King was informed of it, he consented to the Match, upon Condition of David's undertaking an Enterprize attended with the utmost Danger, and wherein he fully E 2 fully expected that he must be cut off. — 3dly, We are again authentically informed, 2 Sam. 21.8. That Michal, Saul's youngest Daughter, after she had been married to David, was given to Adriel the Meholathite, by whom she had five Sons. Is it probable, therefore, that Merab was given to the same Person to Wise? There are no Foundations for such charges of Inconsistencies and Improbabilities, in the Text of the Vatican Copy: There we have no mention of Saul's offering his Daughter to the Man, who should kill the Champion of the Philistines; no mention of his offering his eldest Daughter to David, afterwards, and upon other Motives; and, no mention of Merab's being given to Adriel to Wife. Rejecting, therefore, these three Verses, as no part of the original Text, the Connection stands thus, and the Account is thus given; 18.16. "All Ifrael and Judah loved David, because he went out and came in before them.

20. "And Michal, Saul's Daughter, loved Da-"vid: and they told Saul; and the thing pleaf-"ed him.

21. "And Saul said, I will give him her, that "she may be a Snare unto him; and that the "Hands of the Philistines may be against him."

The Hebrew proceeds, "Wherefore Saul said "unto David, Thou shalt this Day be my Son in "Law in the twain." Which words seem to have been added, to give Countenance to the other before-mentioned interpolated Passage, inserted between the 16th and 20th Verses.

(6.) From the last mentioned Words, in the 21st Verse, there is a Reference, in the Margin of our larger Bibles, to y. 26. where the Words refered to are, "And the Days were not expired."

From whence we learn, that, as our Translators have given us a Version of the whole of what is contained in the present Hebrew Text; so those who inserted this Reference concluded, that in this 26th Verse there was a Reference to something similar to what is mentioned in the Case of Jacob, with Leab and Rachel, Gen. 29. 27. Where Laban fays, after he had fraudulently given to Jacob his eldest Daughter, "Fulfill her Week, and "we will give thee the other also:" And, that the Days were not yet expired, wherein Saul could properly give his second Daughter to David, after the Promise of the Elder. — But, besides taking notice, that the meaning of the Words in this 26th Verse, may be interpreted in a different Manner, and that they have been so, by the Critics and Commentators; we may observe, that they are not at all translated in the Vatican Copy; which we have hitherto looked upon as the genuine Translation of this Part of David's History. However, whether that be universally allowed, or no, it is very remarkable that the Omissions, and Alterations therein, are of fuch a Nature, as fully to clear the whole Passage from all manner of Inconsistencies, Improbabilities, Difficulties and Obfcurities.

(7.) The Message Saul sent to David, to signify to him upon what Conditions he would consent to his Marriage with his Daughter Michal, was, 18.25. "The King desireth not any Dowry," but an Hundred Foreskins of the Philistines." Now, the Hebrew Text tells us, y.27. "That

" David arose and went, he and his Men, and " slew of the Philistines two Hundred Men; and " David brought their Foreskins, and they gave "them in full Tale unto the King." And this is rendered, verbatim, in the Syriac and Arabic Verfions, in the Vulgar Latin, and the Chaldee Paraphrase. The number of the Philistines that David and his Men slew, is not mentioned in the Alexandrian Copy of the Greek Version; but in the Vatican it is faid to be one Hundred, according to the Terms Saul had prescribed. And, when David mentioned this Affair to Ishbosheth, by his Messengers, 2 Sam. 3.14. The Hebrew, the Greek, the Latin, and the Chaldee agree, in telling us that he said, " Deliver me my Wife Michal, "whom I espoused to me for an Hundred Forefkins of the Philistines." The Syriac and Arabic Versions, in this Place, say two Hundred. If therefore, we suppose these to be faithful Versions of the Hebrew Copies the Translators had before them, we must be convinced that, in antient Times, some Hebrew Copies differed from others: that the Alexandrian and Vatican Versions were made from two different Copies: and that the Syriac and Arabic are not always conformable, either to the 70 Version, or to the present Hebrew Text. And in such Cases as these, what was, most probably, the Account in the original Text of Scripture, we may indeed pass our own Judgements, but must not take upon us to determine.

(8.) The Hebrew of the 28th and 29th Verses of this Chapter, as indeed of all the Passages before mentioned, is rightly rendered in our Version, "And Saul saw, and knew, that the Lord

" was with David, and that Michal, Saul's Daugh-"ter, loved him: and Saul was yet the more a-" fraid of David." And thus it is rendered by the Latin, Syriac, Arabic and Chaldee Translators: But, in the Greek Version, according to both the Alexandrian and Vatican Copies, we are given to understand, either that the Translators found in the Copies before them, "And that all Ifrael lov-ed David," instead of, "And that Michal, Saul's "Daughter loved David:" or, that they varied from their Copies in this Particular. Now, there does not appear to be any Reason, that should tempt them to make such an Alteration. Michal's Love to David had, indeed, before been mentioned, y. 20. but fuch a Repetition could not be looked upon as any great Impropriety: and it is there said, that it pleased Saul well; but, then we are told that it pleased him, because he thought it would give him an Opportunity to have David destroyed by the Hands of the Phi-listines. Michal's Love to David might farther raise Saul's Jealousy; as it would increase David's Popularity, and engage Michal to do all she could to preserve him: but yet, if we read here, that Saul now perceived, that "all Israel loved him," we cannot but see the Cause of Saul's Jealousy greatly and justly heightened; as his Sentiments towards David must now be generally known among the People: and therefore, upon this Authority we may be induced to think, that the Sacred Historian did really mention both the former Cause, and this Aggravation of his Jealousy; which prompted him to a more speedy and determined Resolution to destroy him. But, though the the Alexandrian and Vatican Copies agree in this particular, yet they immediately again vary; and the Alexandrian, in other Respects, gives a Verfion of the three last Verses of this Chapter, conformable to our English one: whereas the Vatican represents the Conclusion of this Chapter, and its Connection with the following one, in this manner:

18.28. "And Saul saw, and knew, that the "Lord was with David, and that all Israel loved " him.

29. "And Saul was yet the more afraid of David.

19. 1. "And Saul spake unto Jonathan his Son, "and to all his Servants, that they should kill "David, &c."

I have been the more particular in examining the Difference there is between the present Hebrew Text and this antient Version, in the several Parts of these two Chapters; because, from hence, it is but too apparent, that either the Hebrew Text was originally inconsistent; or, that the printed Text is not conformable to what the Original was; for, it would be, I think, but with ill Success, that any one should go about to defend the Truth, Confistency or Probability of the whole of the present Hebrew. To suppose it then to be the Original, is laying our selves under a Difficulty we are not able to remove; if we would vindicate the Character of the Writer of this Account of David, as that of an able and faithful Historian: and, to suppose it to have been altered, or interpolated, without good grounds, would be altogether unjustifiable: but, this is not supposed but upon good Grounds. We are yet in Possession of

of the Copy of a Version, that is generally thought. to have been written about twelve hundred Years ago: and whether that Copy in the Vatican be the Version itself, or taken from a former Copy, 'tis in vain to enquire: on either Supposition, it was written, according to the Date generally afferted unto it, before any of the Hebrew MS. Copies we have at present discovered, were subfisting: and which were made the Standard by the Masorites. An antient Copy might be different from the modern ones; the Vatican Copy, if it is a faithful Version, was taken from an Hebrew Text, in all respects consistent: And can there well be an Argument, depending upon Probabi-lity only, that can be better supported, in the Proof of any Interpolations whatever, than this which we have introduced, in Order to prove, that the original and antient Hebrew Copies were, in these Chapters, altogether as consistent as the Version in the Vatican Copy appears to be; and for that very Reason, because that is a Version of the original and genuine Text? - When, or by whom, such Variations might be introduced into the Text, as we find at present, it may be impossible for ever, to discover: It was before some of the Greek Versions were taken; for we find a Translation of all those Passages that are here supposed to have been interpolated, in the Alexan-drian MS. which hath Advocates, who plead as high a Claim of Antiquity and Authority for it, as is claimed for the Vatican. And its Antiquity may be as great; and yet that Version taken from a faulty Hebrew Copy: Neither the Alexandrian, nor Vatican Copy are probably Originals of the Versions: The Hebrew Text was in the same State

State it is now, when the other Greek Versions we have in the Aldine, or Complutensian Editions, were made; and also, in those Copies which the Latin, Chaldee and Arabic Translators had before them: It was in the same State, when the Points and the Keris were added; which is evident from the Keris being found upon Chap. 17. 23. and 18. 1,9. This is, occasionally, an additional Argument, to confirm what is said in § v. that the Points are no original Part of the Language; and that they, and the Keris, were added together, not till fuch time as the Hebrew Text was much in the same State as we have it from the Masorites. And, if it may be supposed, if it be allowed, to be probable, that there were more antient Copies of the Hebrew, that were conformable to what we find in the Vatican Version; it may justly be concluded, that they were conformable to the original Autographon: and the consequence will be, a sufficient Vindication of the original Sacred Text, from the charge of Inaccuracy, Inconsistency, Improbability or Contradiction, in this part of David's History.

Thus, I apprehend, I have laid before the Reader a sufficient number of Proofs, to support the Truth of the several Parts of my first General Remark, viz. "That the present Masorete Copy of "the Old Testament, is, in many Places, different from the original Hebrew Text: that some Let- ters, and some Words, some Sentences, and fome Paragraphs have been changed, some add- ed, and some omitted." And, yet at the same time, I have vindicated the original Scriptures from the Charge of any want of Correctness, in the several Passages here mentioned, by pointing out the Causes of the present Errors of the Text.

ET us now proceed to the fecond General Remark; and endeavour to shew, "That " many of the Inconsistencies, Improprieties, and "Obscurities, which occur to an attentive Reader "of any of the Versions, antient or modern, are " occasioned by the Translator's misunderstanding "the true Import of feveral Hebrew Words and "Phrases." The consequence of the Proof of this, will be, shewing the Benefit and Expediency of a more correct and intelligible Translation of the Bible. For, if the English Translators should not rightly have understood the Force of the Hebrew Expressions; or if they should have implicitly followed any of the antient Versions, as thinking they had given the true Sense of the Original, when they really had not done so; the Translation must be so far impersect, as not to convey to the Reader the exact Idea of what the Sacred Writer intended. And it will appear, that it is scarcely to be expected, that any Version should be so correct, as not to leave Room for considerable Amendments. For,

It will, in general, be readily allowed, 1/t. That the precise Meaning of several Words and Phrases in any Language cannot be conveyed into, and expressed by another, without a Periphrasis. 2dly. That in all Languages there are Words so equivocal, that a Translator may be very liable to mistake the Sense they were intended to be used in, in some particular Passages. And 3dly. That Metaphors, Allegories, and Allusions to well known Facts and Customs, render many Passages, in all Books

Books and Languages, obscure to a foreign Reader. These are known to make it somewhat difficult fully to comprehend the meaning of a foreign Author, though he writes correctly in a modern and a living Language. But, when a Translator comes to render a dead one, these Difficulties increase, in proportion to the Time of its Death; the Difference of the Idioms of the Languages translated from, and into; and the Difference of the Customs and Manners alluded to: from those that are now known, or used. - All these Difficulties meet a Man, in their full Force, who undertakes to translate the Scriptures of the Old Testament; and make a reasonable Apology for some Errors and Obscurities in every Version: and they are, some of them, of such a Nature, that all the Learning and Sagacity of Critics may not be able to furmount them. For instance;

In what sense Moses intended to express himself to Pharaoh, Exod. 8.9. where the Text tells us that he said who had, hath been much controverted. Vide Pole in loc. To take these Words in the Sense they are used, Judg. 7.2. and Isa. 10. 15. and translate them as we do, "Glory over me," may give room for a variety of Conjectures: but, I am of Opinion, that no Conjecture can be right; because I think this was not the Expression of Moses; but that Le Clerc justly concludes, that instead of had, he said and that, from thence, it is properly rendered, in all the antient Versions, say, tell, or fix the Time, when I shall intreat for thee.

2. We are told, 2 Kings 16.18. that "Ahaz "turned the Covert for the Sabbath from the House "of

"of the Lord, for the King of Association." We know not, indeed, how better to translate, or Furniture of the Some part of the Building, or Furniture of the Temple seems to be referred to: but the Expression conveys not a more distinct Idea to us, than the mention of Henry the VII. Chapel, in Westminster Abby, would to a Chinese, without any farther Account or Description of it.

... 3. In Hab. 3. 9. we read of the Oaths of the Tribes, but can affix no meaning to it: and it is to little purpose to consult the Commentators. The Syriac Version seems to have been made from Words fomewhat fimilar to שבעות מטות; but I shall not presume to offer at an Emendation of the Text upon that Authority. The Sense of the Passage is clear and connected, in that Version, where we read, "Thine Arrows shall be " fatisfied, according to thy glorious Command:" instead of, "The Oaths of the Tribes, the Word, " Selah:" which is the literal Version of the prefent Hebrew, and altogether unintelligible. - But, in order to shew the expediency of a more correct and intelligible Translation of the Old Testament, it will be proper to point out the Causes of the Obscurities and Mistakes in the Versions; and, as they are of feveral Sorts, to exhibit them under feveral Heads.

SECTION XVI.

HE true Sense and Meaning of Words that are but once, or very rarely, used in a dead Language, must be discovered, either from their Derivation from some particular Radix; or from the Import of the Passage, which leaves us no room to doubt of the Sense of the Word, which is necessary to complete the Context. — But where neither the Derivation, nor the Context thus clearly determine the Sense of the Word, every Translator may think himself at Liberty to indulge his own Conjectures; unless he judges it necessary to render it according to the antient Versions: and yet, in some Cases where they do not agree, he must be determined by his own Choice, which to follow. Thus,

1. The Acclamation, with which Joseph was faluted, when he was made Governor over the Land of Egypt, is one of the Scripture αωαξ λεδομενα, neither the Derivation, nor the Context can fix the meaning of the Word: we find it rendered, "Bow the Knee; Tender Father; Father of the King; and President:" from whence it appears to be most probable, that this was a Title of Respect, given in the Egyptian Language, which the Translators of the Hebrew Scriptures did not know the meaning of, Gen. 41.43. Therefore, only so far is certain, that any Title of Respect and Reverence will, in some measure, answer to the true Import of the Word.

is only used, Judg. 3.22. It is a Word of a very uncommon Form; none of the early Translators, except the Latin, understood it (if they found that Word there) to mean the Dung; nor is it probable, that when Ehud had slain Eglon, in the manner here mentioned, he would have staid to have seen, or, that the Historian would have recorded, such a circumstance as the Dung's coming out of the Wound. The Syriac, and the Arabic Versions, instead thereof, say,

"And he went out hastily;" there might be some other Word instead of פרשרנה; but it is not probable that אינא was repeated, as we find it in the present Copies.

3. We read, 2 Kings 19.29. "Ye shall eat this "Year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second Year, that which springeth of the fame." This is the Translation of which is only used in this Place;) but the Propriety of the Expression cannot well be defended; nor is it much better expressed in the other Versions. It is fometimes very difficult properly to render appropriated Terms, of which this feems to be one: for, from hence it appears, that made use of as a Term, to signify the natural produce of the Ground, the first Year it was uncultivated; and wind the natural Produce of it, the fecond Year.

4. The Words קופים and בוכיים are only used Kings 10.22. and 2 Chron. 9.21. which, from the Latin, Syriac and Arabic Versions, we render Apes and Peacocks: but, from the Context, I am fully persuaded that the Greek Translators of the Book of Kings more properly understood them to mean some Kinds of precious Stones: but of what particular Sorts, it would be in vain to enquire.

5. The Authority of the Lexicographers feems not to be sufficient to justify us in rendering ron To act secretly, or privately, 2 Kings 17.9. where the Context gives us to understand, that the Crimes the Children of Israel are charged with committing, were of a publick Nature: and none of the Antient Versions give Countenance to such

is a very unaccountable Expression, Hab. 1. 9. and, as the Word is only here used; would it not have been better to have followed some of the Antient Versions? The Syriac surely more intelligibly, and more agreeably to the Context, renders the Words, "Their Aspect is very sierce;" and the Latin, "Their Faces are a burning Wind." Hereupon we may lay some Foundation for justifying a Translation: but to give a Word, that is only once used, an arbitrary Meaning, cannot be so well defended.

7. הנואה is only met with Numb. 14. 34. and Job 33.10. In the former place it is rendered, Breach of Promise; and in the latter, Occasion: but the Context, in both the Passages, will lead us to conclude that the Word was used to signify Anger or Resentment. The Liberties, which the Translators, Critics and Commentators have taken with this Word, will fufficiently confirm the Truth of the general Remark, that where the Derivation, or the Context do not clearly ascertain the Sense and Meaning of the amag helomera, and where a Critic thinks proper not to acquiesce in that given in the Antient Versions, there is a very large Field open for Conjecture: and, through the Indulgence of this Liberty, we find this Word render'd by Ultio, Irritatio, Inanitio, Frustratio, Probibitio, Compensatio, Cassatio, Confractio, Ruptura, Fractio, Avulsio, Abruptio, Discessio, Amotio, Contritio, Querela, Occasio, Accusatio, Vacillatio, and Furor Ira. Observations of this Kind must convince us. that there can be no absolute Security of our rightly understanding the Text, by our giving ourfelves felves up to the Authority of any particular Ver-fion, in such cases as these: and, that the greatest security we can have, of rightly judging what is the true Import of such Words, must be gained by applying to the Original; and endeavouring to affix the Meaning from the Derivation, if we can; and, if not, concluding what the Sense of it must be from the Context; and the Translator is chiefly to endeavour to render an απαξ λείσμενον by a Word of a determinate Meaning, and such an one as will well correspond with that plainness, and at the same time, that dignity of expression, so univerfally observable in the Sacred Writings.

SECTION XVII.

A S several of the Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Trees, Plants, Precious Stones, and Musical Instruments mentioned in the Scriptures, are perhaps altogether unknown to us; and, as feveral of those we may know are expressed by Words, whose appropriated Meaning we cannot now discover; no Translator can be certain of giving us the true Names, or conveying any just Idea of the Particu-lars referred to. With respect to these, therefore, a Translator can only inform his Judgment from the Commentaries of those, who have particularly treated upon these several Subjects: and though, after all the Information he shall be able to get, he may be liable to mistake the particular Species intended to be mentioned; yet the Translation will be no otherwise imperfect, than all Translations of Antient Books must necessarily be.

- again reestablished in the Land of Canaan, and permitted to observe the Mosaic Law, they would not, now, be able to distinguish the several Species of Beasts and Birds, that are appointed to be reckoned unclean in the eleventh Chapter of Leviticus: and whoever consults Bochart's Hierozoicon, and the Commentators on this Chapter, will be led to think that insuperable Difficulties would attend such an Enquiry. And, upon this occasion, we may properly call upon the Learned of those who now profess Judaism, and ask them, Whether they can ascertain the several Species of the Creatures there mentioned? and, if they can not, Whether it is possible to suppose the Mosaic Law to continue in Force?
- 2. The Behemoth is mentioned as one of the most remarkable Creatures in the Universe, and particularly described, Job 40.15, &c. The Antient Versions generally agree, in mentioning this Creature by the Name the Historian gives it in Hebrew; but when the Critics undertake to point out the Species referred to, they widely differ in Opinion: some of them tell us, it is a Bull; others, an Elephant; and others an Hippopotomos: Creatures, all very different from each other, and none of them answering the Description here given of the Behemoth: from whence it is evident, that they must all be mistaken in their Conjectures. The cause of the Perplexity of the Critics here, appears to be, their never having feen that Native of Arabia, which is here referred to. The Rhinoceros is now well known to the Europeans; and, from the View and Examination of the Properties ties of that lately brought into England, a curious Observer must be convinced, that this is the Bebemoth, who eateth Grass as an Ox, whose Shields are strong pieces of Brass, and whose Bones are bars of Iron, who trusteth that he can draw up Jordan into his Mouth, and whose Nose pierceth through Snares. This is the Creature fo often called the Unicorn in our Translation, from the Word ראם; Numb. 23. 22. and 24.8. Deut. 33. 17. Job 39. 9. Psal. 22. 21. - 29. 6. - 92. 10. Isa. 34.7. where the Strength, Horn, and Violence of that Creature are spoken of, in such Terms, as are not applicable to any Creature, but the Rhinoceros; and indeed, had our Translators properly attended to the Antient Versions, they would have fo rendered the Words באם and הים. The Rhinoceros may indeed not improperly be called an Unicorn, as having only one Horn; but the Idea generally conveyed by this Word, is that of a Creature formed by Painters only.

3. The Leviathan is particularly described, Job 41. and, in the Margin of our English Bible we are told, it is a Whale, or a Whirlpool: In some of the Antient Versions it is called a Dragon, which no more points out to us the Species of the Creature spoken of, than the name of Leviathan. The Whale it cannot mean; for we can fill his Skin with barbed Irons, and his Head with Fish Spears. Amongst the various conjectures of the Commentators, we find that some of them have thought it to be the Crocodile; which appears best to answer the Description here given; that of an Amphibious, Fierce, Dangerous, Large, and almost irresistible Animal, secured by impenetrable Scales.

In

In Isa. 27. 1. it is called a Crooked Serpent; and Psal. 104.25. he is said to take his passime in the Sea. His name is Metaphorically mentioned Psal. 74.13. And, if we cannot discover how the Levi-athan is referred to; much less can we comprehend what is meant Job 3.8. by raising up their Mourning.

4. The word תנינים, which is sometimes tran-flated Whales, and sometimes Dragons, can mean neither. Dragon, is a word which conveys no particular Idea; because there is no Creature properly so called. Nor will what is said of the הנינים admit of our supposing them to mean Whales. The word הנין feems to be one of a general Signification, and properly applied to any Land, or Water, or Amphibious Animal, of a large and enormous Size. Gen. 1.21. it may comprehend the Whale, amongst other Monsters of the Sea; but appears not to be appropriated to it. Exod. 7.10. it refers to the Serpent into which Moses's Staff was turned, when he cast it down before Pharaoh. And the expression of Job, 7.12. appears to be, "Am I a Monster, that thou settest a watch over " me?" And in Psal. 44. 20. Isa. 34.13. — 35.7. Jer. 9.11. the word is, in general, applied to those noxious and disagreeable Animals, that generally hide themselves in the Dark and inaccessible Coverts; which in our Version, therefore, are called the places of Dragons.

5. We are told, that in order to preserve the Prophet Jonah when he was flung overboard by the Mariners, the Lord had prepared a great Fish to swallow him up, 1.17. What kind of Fish it was, is not specified: but the Greek Translators took upon them to give us the word unros, by which תנין was commonly rendered, perhaps not as intending to specify that it was a Whale: And though St. Matthew, 12.40. makes use of the same word, we may conclude that he made use of it also, in a general Sense; and, that we are not to understand it as an appropriated Term, to point out the particular Species of the Fish; fince the Naturalists have informed us, that the Make of It's m the Whale will not permit it to swallow an Huthan man Body; as the Shark, and some other of the what we water Animals, are known to be capable of her doing. the Several them is a short near the tongue that a

6. What the Gopher Wood was, with which Noah's Ark was built, Gen. 6. 14. - Or, the Shittim Wood, of which the Boards of the Tabernacle were made, Exod. 26. 15. - Or, the Almug Trees, of which Solomon made Musical Instruments, 1 Kings 10.11. — Or, the Juniper Tree, under which Elijab slept, 1 Kings 19.5. — Or, the Wild Gourds, which the Sons of the Prophets gathered, 2 Kings 4. 39. we should in vain enquire. The Curious may confult Hillerus and Celsius upon these, and the like Subjects; but, probably, without obtaining full Satisfaction: And I cannot but be of Opinion, that had we the Book remaining, which Solomon wrote of Trees, from the Cedar which is in Lebanon unto the Hyssop that springeth out of the Wall, 1 Kin. 4.33. we should, from thence, be no more capable of ascertaining the several Species of the Plants and Vegetables of the Land of Canaan, than the Physicians and Botanists are, those of other Countries, from the Works of Theophrastus, Dioscorides, or Pliny.

- 7. The Translators have affixt Names to the twelve precious Stones, which were ordered to be set in Aaron's Breast-plate; Exod. 28.17. And likewise to those twelve, which are mentioned in the description of the new Jerusalem; Rev. 21.19. but with how much uncertainty, will appear to any one who shall consult the Commentators upon these Passages. - The Natural History of all Countries must necessarily be, in some measure, obscure and unsatisfactory to a foreign Reader; because a true Idea of many of the things referred to can only be gotten by Inspection. The References, therefore, to the natural History of Judea, or to what was in use amongst that People, must be as difficult to be understood in the Writings of the Scriptures, as in those of other Authors: and they are not more fo, but in proportion to their Date.
 - 8. We should be apt to smile at the undertaking of any one, who should attempt to describe the several Musical Instruments mentioned in Scripture: And I shall only take occasion to observe upon this Article, that though the Kind and Nature of many of the Instruments made use of in those early Days, must necessarily be unknown; yet it might have been proper for the Translators, either to have given the Hebrew Names of them; or, if they would have endeavoured to express them by such words as convey to us, immediately, the Ideas of some Musical Instruments, they ought always to have given the same Translation to the same Word. We have eight of these mentioned in the 150th Psalm. 1. The rendered a Trumpet, and perhaps not improperly: yet, surely, they should have confined the Trumpet to one of the Musical Instruments mentioned; and the הצצח feems to have the best claim to it, as the description and use of that Instrument, mentioned Numb. 10.2. give us to understand, that it was made of Silver, and gave a sound throughout the Camps and Cities. with indeed is translated a Cornet, 2 Chron. 15. 14. and in several other places: but then so is cycyc also, 2 Sam. 6. 5. So that there is no distinction pointed out between these two Instruments. — 2. נבל called a Psaltery: which is also called a Viol, Isa. 5.12. and a Lute in our Older Translation, Pfal. 57.9.—3. which is generally through the Scriptures rendered an Harp.— 4. nn called a Timbrel; and 1 Sam. 10.5. a Tabret. — 5. מחול here rendered a Dance, may from the Context better be supposed to mean some kind of Musical Instrument: If derivations are to be confidered in these appropriated terms, this word may be concluded to spring from the same Root as John, which, 1 Sam. 10.5. is translated a Pipe, as well as in other places. — 6. John is here called a Stringed Instrument; but, in what particulars it differed from the Pfaltery, or Viol, or Lute, or Harp, or Timbrel, or Tabret, we are as much at a loss to know from the Hebrew Names, as a Chinese would to know what fort of Instruments were called by these Names in England, was a Treatise, wherein they were mentioned, to be translated into that Language. — 7. July is here called an Organ, as it is Gen. 4.21. and perhaps, had it been called by any other name, That might have conveyed to us as perfect an Idea of the ingenuity of Jubal, who was the fifth in descent from Adam. — 8. צלצל is called a Cymbal; and fo also is מצלח i Chron. 25.1. which latter, we are told, 1 Chron. 15. 19. was made of Brass: but that will fcarcely determine the Materials, any more than the Shape of the former. On the whole; it would be equally eafy, and of equal Importance, to determine what fort of Instruments were used amongst the Jews, as it would to know what particulars were referred to in the Proclamation of Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, Dan. 3. 5. which in our Version, are called the Cornet, Flute, Harp, Sackbut, Pfaltery, and Dulcimer. These names give us to understand what was meant in general; and, if the Translators are but confistent, in giving the same Version to the same Hebrew word; it is as much as can well be expected or defired.

Whether Neginoth, which is mentioned in the Title of Psal. 4. is the name of some musical Instrument, or the Name of a Place, or either of them, I shall not pretend to determine; if it was the former, the Hebrew name of it was properly retained in the Version: and the same may be observed of Nebiloth, Psal. 5. Gittith, 8. Muthlabben. 9. Sheminith, 12. Aijeleth-shahar, 22. Shoshannim, 45. Alamoth, 46. Mahalath, 53. Jonath-elem rechokim, 56. Taschith, 57. Shushan-eduth, 60. Jeduthun, 62. — Whether, indeed, the present Hebrew Titles of these, and several other Psalms, are not of Rabbinical Extraction, may be justly doubted; not only on account of their being so very unintelligible; but also, because no notice is taken of them in the Syriac or Arabic Versions.

SECTION XVIII.

As it appears that the Musical Instruments made use of by the Jews can be no better ascertained, than several of the natural Productions of Judea; so when we find the Customs and Ceremonies, the Ornaments and Manners they made use of, alluded to, or, indeed, particularly mentioned; for Want of understanding what Idea was intended to be conveyed by the several appropriated Terms made use of, we can obtain no more adequate Notions, by our Enquiry into these Matters, than into the other. We may come to the Knowledge of their Customs and Manners, in general, and see many Allusions to them referred to, in The short History of the Israelites, wrote by the Abbé Fleury, and lately translated into our Language by Mr. Farneworth: but no Work of that Kind can be supposed to point out, and describe Particulars: And though the Abbé tells us, under the Article of their Wearing-apparel, that the Fashions never changed; yet we must be senfible, that though the Form and Fashion of their Cloaths, in general, might continue much the same; yet they might indulge their Vanity with a great Variety of unnecessary Ornaments: and upon their so doing, the Haughtiness of the Daughters of Zion is so severely censured, and their Dress fo largely, I cannot say so particularly, given an account of: for though there is mention made, Isa. 3. 18. of their Tinkling Ornaments, Cauls, Round Tires, Chains, Bracelets, Mufflers, Bonnets, Leg-Ornaments, Head Bands, Tablets, Ear-rings, Rings, and Nose Jewels, changeable Suits of Apparel, Mantles.

Manties, Wimples, Glasses, Hoods, Vails, and fine Linen; yet neither our Version, nor any other, nor the Original itself, with all the Assistance that Critics and Commentators can give it, will be able to convey to us any just Idea of a full-dressed Tewish fine Lady.

The manner of ornamenting the Court of Abafuerus was, no doubt, very intelligibly described, to those who lived at the Time when the Book of Esther was written; but, from any Particulars, that we can have any just Ideas of, from the Description there given, we are not able to form a Notion, so suitable to the Magnificence of the Eastern Monarch, as was intended to be conveyed: and if a Writer describes, in a Manner plain, and intelligible to the People of his own Time and Country; no Obscurity that may arise upon some particular Passages, from the Length of Time, or Change of Customs, can give any Countenance to the Charge of Inaccuracy upon the original Writer. Leaving, therefore, the Mistakes and Misrepresentations that the Translators may have been guilty of in these, and such like Instances, under the Character of Venial Errors, because they were, in some Measure, unavoidable; let us now proceed to point out some Mistakes that may be fairly imputed to other Causes, and have been occasioned by the not duly attending to the peculiar Idioms, Phraseologies, and Appropriations of Words, in the Hebrew Language; beginning with fuch as are less material, and may rather be looked upon as Improprieties of Style in the Version, than Errors arising from mistaking the Sense of the Original.

THE Hebrew Language abounds in Expletives, which might properly be omitted in a Version, without weakening the Force of the Expression; and which, indeed, cannot always be retained, without introducing a Kind of Impropriety into the Idiom of the Language they are translated into.

1. We read, Gen. 1.2. That Darkness was upon the Face of the Deep: and y. 20. Of Fowl-that might fly upon the Face of the Expanse of Heaven: and 4.14. Thou drivest me out, this Day, from the Face of this Ground: the Word in these, and innumerable other Instances, is evidently an Expletive; and, in some other places, less agreeable to the Idiom of our Language, than they are here; as Gen. 19.21. See, I have accepted thy Face: and 46.28. To direct his Face: and Exod. 19.7. Moses laid before their Faces all these words: and 1 Kin. 13.6. Intreat now the Face of the Lord thy God. Our Translators, indeed, have frequently omitted giving this Word a literal Version, and have only mentioned the Thing or Person spoken of, without adding, the Face of it, in Conformity to the Hebrew Expresfion. And though long Use hath familiarised this, and several other Hebrew Idioms of Speech, to the English Readers; yet, where the Expressions are of such a Nature, that they would be carefully avoided by a correct Writer, and a Master of the English Style, I think they might, more properly, be varied so, as to be made more suitable to the Propriety of the English Idiom.

2. For the same Reason ways should not always be translated Soul, though the Word Soul, by the Use of it in the Translation of the Bible, hath acquired nearly the same Latitude with way in the Hebrew; which is sometimes used expletively, sometimes means Life, sometimes the whole Man, and fometimes is applied to the irrational Part of the Creation. A few Instances of which will be fufficient to shew the Impropriety of the Translation, where the Word Soul is mentioned in feveral Passages, in which no correct Writer would now make Use of it. Gen. 12.13. My Soul shall live because of thee. 19.20. Let me escape thither, and my Soul shall live. Exod. 12.16. Save that which every Soul must eat. Lev. 5.2. If a Soul touch any unclean Thing. 22.11. If the Priest buy a Soul with his Money. Num. 11.6. But now our Soul is dried away. 31.28. One Soul of five Hundred, both of the Men, and of the Beeves, and of the Asses, and of the Sheep. Psal. 57.4. My Soul is among Lyons. 106.15. He fent Leanness into their Soul. - The Writers of the New. Testament also, finding Juxn to be the general Tranflation of way have used that Word both for Life, and Person; and therefore it is sometimes improperly rendered, a Soul: and when ψυχη is, in some places, used to signify Life; the Writers are best justified in their Expressions, by imputing it to their Knowledge of the general Import of the Hebrew Word. Mat. 2.20. They are dead which, fought the young Child's Life. 6.25. Take no thought for your Life. Luke 12.23. The Life is more than Meat. John 10.15. I lay down my Life for the Sheep, Rom. 13.1. Let every Soul be fubject soul that will not hear that Prophet. 1 Pet. 3. 20.

Eight Souls were faved out of the Water.

3. And, as Soul is used expletively, so is Body also, in several Passages of the New Testament; as Rom. 6.16. That the Body of Sin may be destroyed. 7.4. Ye are dead to the Law by the Body of Christ. 7.24. Who shall deliver me from the Body of this Death; or, from this Body of Death? Col. 2.11. In putting off the Body of the Sins of the Flesh. And it may be said, that Body is here a Figurative Expression; yet the Metaphor is so obscure, as not readily to convey any clear Idea to us. We read of "the Body of Heaven in his Clear-" ness," Exod. 24.10. but this is owing to a wrong Translation of the Word עצם השמים; for בעצם השמים means, " as the Heaven it self," as אצם היום הזר means, " that self same Day."

4. The Word y' was used, according to the Idiom of the Hebrew Language, in a Manner that appears somewhat incorrect in a western Version. Exod. 9.35. As the Lord had spoken by the Hand of Moses. Numb. 16.40. Said unto him by the Hand of Moses. Josh. 21.2. Commanded by the Hand of Moses. 1 Kin. 14.18. Spake by the Hand of Abijab. Psal. 89.48. Shall be deliver his Soul from the Hand of the Grave? 1 Sam. 25.39. The Lord hath pleaded the Cause of my Reproach from the Hand of Nabal, &c. The Translators were so much aware of the Impropriety of retaining this Expletive, in some Passages, that sometimes they have changed it into another Word, and sometimes omitted it; as Pfal. 22.20 Instead of the Hand of the Dog, they have faid, the Power

Power of the Dog. Dan. 6. 27. The Power of the Lyons. Lev. 5. 7. "If his Hand cannot reach to "the Sufficiency of a Lamb," they have more properly translated; "If he be not able to bring "a Lamb." Lev. 25.35. Heb. "If thy Brother's Hand faileth." Version, "If thy Brother be fallen into Decay." See Exod. 14.31. Lev. 25.26,46. Deut. 16.17. Prov. 7.20. Zech. 4.12. and innumerable other Places, where the Margin will shew how the Translators have varied the Hebraism introduced by the Word 7.

5. The Name of a Person, or Thing, is an Hebraisin whereby the Thing or Person are frequently expressed; as Psal. 75.1. For, that thy Name is near, thy wondrous Works declare. 5.11. Let them that love thy Name be joyful in thee. This Phrase is very common in the Writings both of the Old and New Testament; so that the Mention of many Instances would be needless. St. John saith, that Jesus Christ gave the Power to become the Sons of God to them that believe on his Name; 1.12. See John 12.23. — 3.18. — 20.31. Ats 1.15. Rev. 3.4. But it would not now be thought to be expressed according to the Propriety of the Idiom of our Language, to say, I believe on the Name of God the Father Almighty; or, I believe on the Name of Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord: and yet, the Version of this Hebraism hath rendered this Expression well intelligible.

6. Amongst the Expletives, in the Hebrew Language, may be reckoned 1, and יורוי. Almost every Sentence begins with a which is generally translated And, though there be no kind of Conjunction with, or Reference to the foregoing Passage. In fuch Cases, the Insertion of And might, not improperly, be omitted; as particularly in the fifth Chapter of Genesis, where almost every Verse begins with this Particle, though one half of them at least, are evidently Expletives: And where the 1 is used in a Manner somewhat conjunctive; yet the fometimes rendering it; Now, or But, or For, or There, would be more agreeable to the English

Idiom, than always to translate it And.

The Word יהי is commonly rendered, And it came to pass: but it is very often used without any apparent Design of particularly exciting the Reader's Attention; so that I think Dr. Doddridge's Observation upon the Word esevero (by which single) is generally rendered in the 70; and which is frequently made Use of in the same Manner, by the Writers of the New Testament,) a very just one, when he fays, in the Note on Luke 2: 46. " The Word eyevero, it came to pass, is a mere Ex-" pletive; and I did not imagine that the Rules " of the most faithful, and exact Translation, " would oblige me always to retain it." The Reader, or at least a Translator, will have the Opportunity of observing many more Words, and Expressions, in the Hebrew, which may be considered as Expletives; and how far they may more properly be omitted, or retained in a Version, he will pass his own Judgment.

SECTION XX.

THE Pronoun Relatives, made Use of in the Scripture-Language, frequently refer to a Scripture-Language, frequently refer to a remote Antecedent: by which it may fometimes happen that Obscurities, Difficulties, and Mistakes may arise in reading or explaining the Passage. And if the indeterminate Application of these Pronouns must be called an Inaccuracy, it is no more than what all Writers, in the highest Esteem, have been sometimes guilty of: so that to endeavour to depretiate, or pretend not to understand the Scriptures, upon this account, may shew a Weakness of Judgment, or a Depravity of Heart: Thus,

1. Upon Gen. 14.20. "And He gave Him "Tythes of all:" It hath been pretended to be doubted, whether Abraham paid Tythes to Melchizedek, or Melchizedek to Abraham. Had no other Account of this Transaction been given; and, had we not, in this Account, some Intimation who it was that gave Tythes; the Relatives are mentioned in so indeterminate a Manner, that there might have been room for a Doubt to whom they ought to be respectively applied: though it must be confessed, in that case, it might more probably be thought, that Melchizedek gave Tythes to Abrabam. But, when in this very Account, we are informed that Melchizedek met Abraham under the Character of one whose Dignity, both with Respect to his temporal and spiritual Power, was far fuperior to that of Abraham: When he is represented as a King, and Abraham as a Sojourner only in the Land of Canaan: When he acted in the Capacity of Priest of the most high God, when he blessed Abraham; could there be really a Doubt in the Mind of any one, (who had ever heard of the nature of Tythes, and who had read that Jacob vowed to give the Tenth of his Substance to the Lord,) whether Abraham gave Tythes Tythes to the Priest of the most High God, or, whether the King and the Priest gave Tythes of all to Abraham? And when we are so expressly told by an Apostle, Heb. 7. 6. that "Melchizedek" received Tythes of Abraham, and blessed him that "had the Promises;" the Objection of the Insidel, grounded upon a Relative's referring to a remote Antecedent, shews what he is.

- 2. We are informed, Exod. 31.18.—32.16.—34.
 1. Deut. 4.13.—9.10. and 10.4. That God wrote the ten Commandments, delivered at Mount Sinai, upon two Tables of Stone: Therefore, though the Relative "He wrote" Exod. 34.28. according to precise grammatical Construction, applies the writing of the ten Commandments to Moses: yet, is this Ground sufficient, for a free Enquirer, to make it a Doubt, by whom the Tables were written?
- 3. Mat. 5.12. "For so persecuted they the Pro-"phets which were before you." Who? Not the Men who reviled the Apostles; but, They, is a general Relative, and not improperly applied to the Men of former Times.
- 4. Luke 5.17. "And the Power of the Lord "was present to heal them." Not the Pharisees and Doctors of the Law, who are just before mentioned as present with him: but, in general, those who had Need of Healing, and Faith to be healed.
- 5. Deut. 31.23. "And Moses gave Joshua the "Son of Nun a Charge, and said, Be strong and "of good courage; for thou shalt bring the Chil-"dren of Israel into the Land which I sware un-"to them; and I will be with thee." Now, we must either suppose, that here is an Ellipsis; or, that the Relative I is to be applied to the Lord, and not to Moses. The Ellipsis must be supplied by, And Moses gave Joshua a Charge in the Name of the Lord. And whether, without supplying the Ellipsis, a Translator might not be thought to be at Liberty to fay, The Lord, instead of I, I shall leave to the Reader's Judgment.

6. The true Import of the Relatives is sometimes liable to be mistaken, in some Passages of all Authors; which will be fome Apology for the Translators of the Scriptures, who have faid, 2 Kin. 2.15. And when the Sons of the Prophets faw him; instead of saw it: for the Relative refers not to the Person of Elisha, but, to the Miracle which they faw wrought by him. - And fo again, it is mistaken Rom.7.1. where St. Paul saith, That the Law hath Dominion over a Man, not as long as he liveth, but as long as it liveth; for the Apostle was now writing to those, who had been under the Dominion of the Law, but were now freed from it, That being dead, wherein they were before held.

7. The most accurate Writers, in all Languages, have not always thought it necessary to express the Relatives, that must be understood, in order to convey their meaning, according to the strict Rules of Rhetoric. Thus, when the Sons of Jacob told their Father, that it was required that Benjamin should go down with them into Egypt, they said unto him, "If thou wilt not send, we "will not go down:" If thou wilt not send him, is necessary to be understood; and, though not expressed, the Sense of what was said, and meant, is fufficiently conveyed; Gen. 43. 5. And so again, Gen. 48.14. " Israel stretched out his right Hand, " and laid upon Ephraim's Head:" But do not all the antient and modern Versions, as it was neceffary, supply the Relative, and say, laid it upon Ephraim's Head? It would be, in some Measure, needless, and endless to multiply Instances of this Sort. A careful Reader of the English Bible, that is inclined to take Notice of them, will find them marked out to him by the Relatives being supplyed in the Italic Character. But, it may be proper to observe, that where the Relative is omitted, a Translator may possibly insert one improperly: Thus: Deut. 6.3. we read, "Observe to do it;" though, as the Relative was to refer to the Statutes, and Commandments, mentioned in the preceding Verse, it was requisite from the Context to fay, Observe to do them. And these few Remarks, upon this Subject, may be sufficient to shew that a Reader, and especially a Translator, should be careful to attend to, and apply, or supply, the Relatives in a proper Manner.

SECTION XXI.

THE several Tenses and Conjugations of the Hebrew Verbs are so indiscriminately used, that no general grammatical Rules can teach us how to render all the Formatives in a precise and proper Manner: and any great attachment to such Rules may lead a Translator to misunderstand the Import of the Word, and the Force of the Expression.

1. One Rule of the Grammarians is, "That the Hebrew Verbs have no proper present Tense;

G 3 "but

"but, that the Participle, with the Addition of a Personal Pronoun, is used as a Substitute for it."

This is so far from being a general Rule, founded upon the just Observation of any Peculiarity in the Hebrew Language, that, in contradiction thereto, we may, with great Propriety, rather lay it down as a Rule, "That what the Grammarians call the Præterit, is so very commonly used to express the Present Tense, that this may as properly be called the Present and Præterit, as the same Tense by the Greek Grammarians is called Præsens, & Præteritum impersectum. And, of this our Translators seem to have been fully sensible, who have, therefore, very frequently given it a present Signification. Let any Man but read the three first Psalms, in the Original, and compare it with our later Version; and he will be immediately convinced, how properly the Translators have rendered what is called the Praterit, by the Present Tense. And by attending tó this general Observation, a critical Reader, whenever he meets with this Tense, will consider himself as at Liberty to render it either by the Present or Præterit, as the Import of the Context shall appear, most properly, to require.

2. Another Rule of the Grammarians is, "That, "when the conversive Vau is put before the Fu"ture Tense, it is not then to be considered as re"fering to what is to come; but is to be under"stood in a Present, or Præterit Sense." The first part of the Rule is so far just and general, that, when what is called the Future Tense, with the Vau before it, begins a Sentence, it hath very rarely a Future Signification: But, that it is generally converted into a Present, or Præterit Sense, will not hold true; for the Instances are innumerable, where, in that case, the Context will direct, and require us to give the Verb a Perfect, or Præterpluperfect Signification. To point out a few of these will be sufficient to convince the Reader, that this Rule of the Grammarians hath led the Tranflators into many Errors. - Our Version of Gen. 2.2. is, "On the Seventh Day God ended his "Work, which he had made." A Reader of common Attention cannot but be surprised at this Expression; when he sees it declared, in the Verse immediately preceding, that in Six Days, the Heaven and the Earth were finished, and all the Host of them. And the Greek Translators seem to have been fully aware of the Impropriety of such an Expression; and, for that Reason, to have put the Sixth Day into their Version, instead of the Sewenth. But had they confidered, as Drusius, and many since him have done, that the Word might be properly used in a Præterpluperfect Sense, there would have been no occasion for such an Alteration. He renders the Word, compleverat, "On the Seventh Day God had ended his Work." And it is very observable, that the Future Tense, with the Vau before it, ought generally to be confidered in that view, throughout this Second Chapter of Genesis. In the First we have an Account of the Order of the Creation, in Six Days; and that, on the Third, God had commanded the Earth to produce the feveral Sorts of Vegetables. The Second is a kind of Recapitulation, in a more particular Manner, of what was, in general, mentioned in the First: We are not, therefore, to confider-

sider the Future Tense of the Verbs, which we meet with in this Second Chapter, to be used in the Present or Præterit, but in the Præterpluperfeet Tense: Not, $1.7. The Lord God formed Man of the Dust of the Ground, and breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life; and Man became a living Soul: But, The Lord God had formed — had breathed — and the Man was become a living Soul. So, $1.8. The Lord God had planted a Garden - and there he had put the Man. And, y. o. Out of the Ground the Lord God had made to grow every Tree. - So that the planting of the Garden is included in the general Account of the Creation, given in the First Chapter; and is not to be supposed to be here mentioned as an Account of what was done afterwards. And, it is not only in This Chapter, or in Recapitulations, that the Future Tense is to be considered as a Præterpluperfect, but also Gen. 18. 22. Now the Men had turned and were gone. — 31.19. Laban was gone. — 39.1. Potiphar had bought. — 47.14. Joseph had gathered: and in so many other Places, that the Context must determine in what Sense this Future Tense, as it is called, is to be taken.

3. As the Hebrew Grammarians found, or made no Rule to distinguish the Optative, Potential, and Subjunctive Moods, the Sense whereof is very frequently necessary to be expressed, in order to convey the Sentiments of the sacred Writers; they have, by this Neglect, occasioned the Translators to give an improper Version of many Passages; by attending to the Import whereof, a careful Reader will easily discover, that the Characteristicks ticks of these several Moods are comprehended in, and expressed by the Future Tense: To render which, so constantly, by shall, or will, plainly appears to disguise the Sentiment of the Writer, and diminish the Propriety of the Expression.—This will, I think, be sufficiently exemplified by a few Instances out of the Book of Psalms.

Psal. 6.10. The Future Tense is rendered Optatively in our later Version. Let all mine Enemies be ashamed, and sore vexed, let them return and be ashamed suddenly.

9.7. The Lord hath prepared his Throne for Judgment, that he may judge the World in Righteousness.

There is, frequently, so much Confidence implied in the Words shall and will, as is scarcely consistent with the Sentiments of the Pfalmist, and the Circumstances in which he represents himself to be; so that the necessity of considering the Verb in another sense is obvious: thus, 17.6. appears to be more properly expressed, I have called upon thee, for thou canst hear me.

25.14. Mine Eyes are ever looking unto the Lord, that he may (or, because he can) pluck my Feet out of the Net.

33.17. An Horse is a vain Thing for Safety, neither can he deliver any by his great Strength.

41.10. It is rendered, Raise me up that I may requite them; though it was shall in the older Versions.

45.11. Forget thine own People, and thy Father's House, that the King may have Pleasure in thy Beauty.

55.17,19. That the Lord may fave me: and that he may hear my Voice.

57.3,4. He can fend from Heaven, and fave me: God can fend forth his Mercy and Truth.

- 65.5,8. Thou canst shew us wonderful Things in thy Righteousness. Let them that dwell in the uttermost Part of the Earth be asraid at thy Tokens.
- 79.10. It is rendered, Wherefore should the Heathen fay, Where is their God?

81.14. It is rendered, I should soon have subdued their Enemies.

90, 14. It is rendered, That we may rejoice, and be glad all our Days.

102.18. Let this be written for those that come after, that the People which shall be born may praise the Lord.

109.7. It is observable how frequently this Tenje is rendered by, Let, in this Pfalm: and y.

27. that they may know.

122.6. Let them prosper that love thee.

132.7. Why should it be here, We will go. -

And y. 9. Let thy Priests be clothed?

whither can I go from thy Spirit, or, whither can I flee from thy Presence? If I should climb up into Heaven, thou art there: If I should go down into Hell, thou art there also, &c.——Here the Verbs are in the Future Tense, though it is not intimated in the Translation.

From this View it appears that the Import of the Subjunctive, Optative and Potential Moods is expressed by the Future Tense, though they are not mentioned in the Hebrew Grammars. And,

4. It may be proper to observe, that the Writers of the New Testament, being well acquainted with the Idiom of the Hebrew Language, have sometimes used the Greek Future Tense in the same Manner: Mat.12.31. might be translated, "All "Manner of Sin and Blasphemy may be forgiven "unto Men; but the Blasphemy against the Holy "Ghost cannot be forgiven unto Men. And, who-"soever speaketh a Word against the Son of Man, "it may be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh "against the Holy Ghost, it cannot be forgiven "him." See also Mark 3.28. and Luke 12.10. And again, Mat.18.21. "How oft may my Bro-"ther sin against me, and I must forgive him?" And though this Sense of the Passages may be well intelligible in our present Version, yet whether such Alterations would not add to the Correctness of the Language, I shall appeal to the Reader.

5. The Present, or Præterit Tense is frequently used to express the Sense of the Future? and particularly, when God is speaking to his People, by Himself, or his Prophets, he mentions what he had determined to do, as done, or then doing: Thus, Gen.6.17. And I, even I, do bring a Flood "of Waters upon the Earth."—Isa.3.1. "The "Lord of Hosts doth take away from Serusalem," and from Judah, the Stay and the Stass.

Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is sallen.—17.1. Damascus is taken away from being a City. This Manner of Expression is so common, that I need not multiply Instances; but may here properly observe, that this Idiom of Speech is adopted by the Writers of the New Testament. Mat. 3.10. Every Tree which bringeth not forth good Fruit, is hewn down, and cast into the Fire.—18.20. Where two or three are gathered together, ther, in my Name, there am I, in the midst of them. — Mark 9.31. The Son of Man is delivered into the Hands of Men. Now, in these, and all other such like, instances, I cannot think it would be too great a Liberty for a Translator to take, to vary the Phraseology, and insert the Verbs in those Tenses, which the Propriety of our Language requires.

6. The auxiliary Verbs, to have, and, to be, are frequently omitted to be mentioned, in their feveral Conjugations and Tenses. The Idiom of the English Language admits of no such Omissions: therefore it is necessary for a Translator not only to supply them, but regularly to insert them in their proper Conjugations, and Tenses, as the Context shall appear to require. And if there be any Mistakes in our Version, of this Sort, the attentive Reader may readily discover, and reform them, as what is supplied is printed in the Italic Character.

7. To shew that the Conjugations Kal, and Pihel, and Hiphil are sometimes used in a Passive Sense; — That Niphal, and Hophal are sometimes used in an Active one; - That Hiphil, and Hophal are not always Causative; - That the other Conjugations are sometimes used in a Causative Sense; - And, that Hithpahel is not always Reciprocal; would be only producing instances upon Points that have been frequently illustrated by every Commentator; and must be known, and allowed, by every one who is but little conversant in the Hebrew Language: so that great care is required in a Translator, to give the Sense of the Word so as is most agreeable to the Context.

8. No Conjugation analogous to the Hebrew Hiphil, is used either in the Greek, or Latin, or any of the Modern Languages: nor can the Force of it be expressed otherwise than by adding a Causative Word. But, as the Writers of the New Testament were well acquainted with the Use of this Conjugation; and knew that the Sense of it was frequently to be understood as implied, where the Characteristics of it were wanting; they have, in the same Manner, introduced the Use of it into the Language of that Book. Thus, Mat. 5. 29. If thy right Eye offend thee, means, If thy right Eye cause thee to offend. And, v. 30. If thy right Hand cause thee to offend. And 18.6. Whoso shall offend one of these little ones, means, whosoever shall cause one of these little ones to offend. See y. 7, 8, 9. Mark 9.42. Luke 17.2. And Mat. 6.13. Lead us not into Temptation, means, Suffer us not to be led into Temptation: For, let no Man say, when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with Evil, neither tempteth he any one." Jam. 1.13.

SECTION XXII.

SEVERAL general Expressions, in all Languages, frequently admit of, and require a Limitation: without attending to which, the true Sense and Meaning of many Passages will not be rightly understood: And, as the Eastern Nations indulged themselves the most freely in the Use of strong and sigurative Expressions, the Hebrew Writings may be observed to admit of, and require, more Limitations than perhaps any other.

1. The Hyperbole appears, in the facred Writings, in its fullest Strength and Beauty; and adds great Dignity to the Expression. It is not, therefore, intended to be intimated, that this, and fuch like Figures, which constitute the true Sublime, should admit of any Alteration in a Version: but, that the Reader should rather admire them as Beauties, than look upon them as Improprieties of Language.

2 Sam. 1.23. They were swifter than Eagles; they were stronger than Lyons. - 2.18. Afabel was as fwift as a wild Roe. - 1 Chro. 12.8. Their Faces were like the Faces of Lyons; and they were as swift as the Roe upon the Mountains. -Fer. 4.13. The Destroyer of the Gentiles shall come up as Clouds; and his Chariots shall be as a Whirlwind; his Horses shall be swifter than Eagles. - Amos 2.9. The Height of the Amorite was like the Height of Cedars, and he was strong as the Oaks. — Numb.13.33. We faw there the Giants, and we were, in our own Sight, as Grasshoppers, and so were we in their Sight. - Deut. ven. — Hab. 1.8. The Horses of the Chaldeans are fwifter than Leopards, and more fierce than Evening Wolves. — Isaiah 40.17. All Nations before him are as Nothing; and they are counted to him less than Nothing, and Vanity. — John 21.25. There are many other Things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the World itself could not contain the Books, that should be written.

2. The Synecdoche, or mentioning the Whole for a confiderable Part, is a Figure fo commonly used by all Writers, that the great and little Dablers in Objections to the Scriptures would have been ashamed to have produced any instances of that Sort as marks of inaccuracy, had they had Modesty.

Upon the Word 5 Noldius justly observes,

1. Vocula omnis intelligenda juxta subjectam

- Materiam.
 - 2. Interdum, per omnes intelliguntur plurimi.
- 3. Interdum, non tam totum, quam perfectum notat.
- 4. Interdum, ne hoc quidem, sed sincerum tantum.

Poole tells us, it is objected to the Credit of the Historian, who saith, Exod. 9.6. "All the Cattle "of Egypt died;" that some are mentioned as still remaining alive, y. 19.20. And Objections are ready at Hand, for those who please to make them, against Exod. 8.17. All the Dust of the Land became Lice, throughout all the Land of Egypt. — Deut. 2.25. I will put the Dread of thee, and the Fear of thee, upon the Nations that are under the whole Heavens. - 1 Chro. 14.17. And the Fame of David went out into all Lands; and the Lord brought the Fear of him upon all Nations. — Acts 2.5. And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout Men, out of every Nation under Heaven. - 15.21. Moses of old Time hath, in every City, them that preach him. -Such unpardonable Inaccuracies as these, surely, call aloud for the severe Animadversions of a Collins, a Morgan, a Chubb, and a Bolinbroke.

3. Neither can the general Negatives be faid not to be liable to some formidable Objections: and we must be obliged to allow that, not, frequently means, not only, or scarcely, or, not chiefly; or rather than. Thus, Gen. 45.8. It was not you only that sent me hither. — 48.10. The Eyes of Israel were dim for Age, so that he could scarcely see. — Exod. 16.8. Your Murmurings are not only against us, but against the Lord also. — Psal. 51.

16. Thou desirest not Sacrifice chiefly; thou deslightest not in Burnt-Offerings only. — Prov. 8.10.

Receive my Instructions rather than Silver. — Hos. 6.6. I will have Mercy rather than Sacrifice. — Mat. 10.20. It is not ye only that speak. — John 5.34. I receive not Testimony from Man only. — 1 Cor. 1.17. Christ sent me not chiefly to Baptize. — 2 Cor. 7.12. I did it not only for his Sake that had done the Wrong, nor for his Sake only that suffered Wrong; but chiefly that our Care for you might appear. — Eph. 6.12. We wreste not only against Flesh and Blood, but also against Principalities and Powers, against spiritual Wickedness in high Places.

4. The general Notations of Time are often given without any exact Precision; and from the Words then, or, in those Days, we are not informed at what Time John the Baptist came preaching in the Wilderness of Judea, Mat.3.1. Nor in what Part of John's Ministry, Jesus came to be baptized, from Mark 1.9.

The Words תמול שלשם must be literally rendered, Yesterday and the third Day; but their general Meaning is, beforetime; and so, indeed, they are commonly translated in our Version; as Gen. 31. 2. Jacob beheld the Countenance of Laban, that it was not towards him as before.—Exod.

5.7. Ye shall no more give the People Straw to make Brick as heretofore: — Exod. 21.29. If the Ox were wont to push with his Horn in time past. — Deut. 4.42. And hated him not in times past. — See, 19.4. — Josh. 3.4. Ye have not passed this Way heretofore. See 4.18. Ruth. 2.11. I Sam. 4.7.—10.11.—19.7.—2 Kin. 13.5. &c.

In like manner and, which properly fignifies to morrow, is used to express the time to come indefinitely. Gen. 30.33. So shall my Righteousness answer for me in time to come. See Exod. 13.14. Josh. 4.6, 21. So auriou is used Mat. 6.34. Take no thought for the Morrow, for the Morrow shall take thought for the Things of itself. And probably the emaupiou John 1.29, 35. does not strictly mean the next Day: Nor the third Day, John 2.1. refer to any particular time. We must surely consider that Passage, Luke 13.32 in this general view, "Go ye, and tell that Fox, Behold, I cast out Dewis; and I do Cures to day, and to morrow; and the third Day I shall be perfected. Never-theless, I must walk to day, and to morrow, and the Day following." Let those, who find any Author's Writing in so correct a Manner, as not to require such Limitations as these to be put upon several general Words, censure the Scriptures, upon this account, as being inaccurate.

SECTION XXIII.

THE Remarks in the preceding Section were not necessarily inserted, in pursuance of the general Design of these Papers; as they neither point out any Errors in the Hebrew Text, nor shew any occasion for altering our Translation of it: And what I shall here make, will appear to be of that fort which are of no great importance. The uncouth and obsolete words and expressions, that are met with in our English Version of the Bible, are generally intelligible, and convey the Ideas the Writers had in view: But as our Language is very much improved in Politeness and Correctness, since that Version was made, it may properly be wished that the Scriptures might receive every Advantage, which the improvement of our Language can give them: especially, as the Delicacy of some People's Ears is pretended to be disgusted with every uncouth found. No Doubt but that the Improvement of the Language, was one of the Considerations, that induced King James to order a new Version to be made, about forty years after that published, and made Use of in the time of Queen Elizabeth; the Translators whereof appeared so well to have understood the Scriptures, that little more than the Language of it was altered, by the Translators, in King James's time. It is now above 140 Years fince that Version was made: and, will it not be thought, will it not be found upon examination, that our Language hath been more altered, and received greater improvements, in the last 140 Years than in the 40 Years preceding? And would not, consequently, a greater Benefit arise now, from a new Version, upon that account, than could then be expected?

1. The Reader will be the better convinced of this by bringing into View some of those Words and Expressions, which would certainly be altered by Persons of such Learning and Judgment, as would, undoubtedly, be appointed to undertake a new Translation, should his Majesty be pleased to give Orders for that purpose.

Advisement. Afore. Albeit. Aliant. Ambushment. Anon. Ate. Bestead. Bettered. Bewray. Blains. Chaws. Chode. Cracknels. Days-man. Difcomfiture. Doleful Creatures. Fet. Folk. Fray. Habergeon. Haply. Holpen. Hosen. Hough and Houghed their Horses and Chariots. His Strength shall be Hunger-bitten. Issues of Life and Death. Kerchiefs. Lad. Lade and Laden. Leafing. Leefe. List. Listed and Listeth. Magnifical. Marishes. Mete and Meted. Mufflers. Munition. Nurture. Outer Darkness. Peeled. Poll and Polled. Purtenance. Searchings of Heart. Seethe and Seething. Servitor. Silver Shrines. Silverlings. Sith. Sod and Sodden. Stature. Strew and Strewed. Swolen. Tablets. Terrises. Trow. Twain. Unpatient. Unwittingly. Wastness. Wench. Wert. Wist. We do you to Wit. Wot and Wotteth.

It would be tedious to refer to the several Passages where these Words are used, to shew in what Manner they are introduced and connected: It will in general occur from the Mention of them, to those who are so conversant in the Scriptures as they ought to be; and may be discovered by others, with very little trouble.

2. Those Expressions, which, though delivered in Words of common Use, may be called uncouth, from their being, in some measure, unintelligible, require such Alterations as the Original will most properly admit to be made.

That expression, Glory over me, Exod. 8.9. hath been already considered, § XV. 1.— There is no good foundation for that Version of Exod. 17.16.

Be-

Because the Lord hath sworn: Perhaps the more proper Version may be; "Because their Hand is "against the Throne of the Lord, the Lord will "have War with Amalek, from Generation to "Generation." But, as it feems necessary, that there should be a Reference to the Name of יהוה נסי it may justly be suspected, that po is here put instead of DJ. In which case, the Version would be, "Because their Hand is against the Banner of the Lord." Josh. 11.13. "As for the Cities that food still in their Strength, Israel burned none "of them, save Hazor only." Standing in their Strength conveys no particular Idea; nor will may be a proper Name of the District, wherein may be a proper Name of the District, wherein these Cities stood: or, the Latin and Syriac Versions may have properly rendered it, "As for the "Cities which stood upon the Hills." Judg. 21. 22. "For ye did not give unto them, at this time, "that ye should be guilty:" I think might, more properly, be rendered: "Because ye did not give "unto them at this time, ye are to blame."—

1 Kin. 14. 14. "But what? Even now." Might we not say, "But when? Even now." — 2 Kin. 16. 15. "And the brazen Altar shall be for me 16.15. "And the brazen Altar shall be for me "to enquire by." It should be, "for me to wor-" ship at;" for so the Verb pe evidently signifies, Pfal. 27.4. — Ifa. 10. 27. "The Yoak shall " be destroyed, because of the Anointing." I need not add to the Commentaries upon this Passage: It may be sufficient to observe, that anointed suits the Original, here, as well as anointing; and, the Anointed, may properly mean the Children of Israel, who were the chosen people of the Lord: for

I see no reason for applying it to Christ, in this Context. — Isa. 27.8. "In measure, when it "shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it: He "stayeth his rough Wind, in the Day of the East-"Wind." Here are Words, intelligible, and in common Use; but when they are thus connected the Sentence is no more intelligible, than it was in the former Version. "In measure, in the "Branches thereof thou wilt contend with it, when he bloweth with his rough Wind, in the "Day of the East Wind." The Word מאסאר is only used in this Place, and how the other Words may be construed, I shall refer to the Commentators, and the Reader's own Judgment. — Ezek.13.18. "Wo to the Women which sew "Pillows to all Arm-holes, and make Kerchiess " upon the Head of every Stature, to hunt Souls." This is a Translation of the antient Versions: But if it be a proper Translation of the Original, the Commentators have, hitherto, been so deficient as not to give a good Explanation of these uncommon Phrases: so that they convey no just Ideas to the English Reader. - Nahum 2.7. "Her " Maids shall lead her as with the Voice of Doves; "tabring upon their Breasts." The Sentiment is evidently, as the Latin, Greek, and Chaldee Versions give it, That the Maids of her that was led away Captive should mourn as Doves, and beat upon their Breasts; as Persons in the utmost Distress: and Tabring, was, certainly, very injudiciously put for Smiting, which was the Word in our former Version.—These instances are here mentioned, farther to shew the Benefit and Expediency of a more correct and intelligible Translation of the Bible, than we have at present; and, that a Translator should not too strictly adhere to any of the former Versions.

SECTION XXIV.

COMMON Words, of a general and well known Signification, have frequently, in all Languages, been applied as appropriated Terms, in a Sense very different from their general Import. Whenever, therefore, such Appropriations are not exactly known, or not duly attended to, a Translator may mistake the Sense of his Author, and not convey that Idea to the Reader which the Writer had in View.

Every Englishman knows the general Import of the word Stone: And, he knows that when that Word is applied to Weight, it hath an appropriated Meaning: And Persons of different Places, and different Occupations, know that this Term is variously applied; and that, though a Stone Weight is, in general, 14 Pounds: yet, that a Stone of Beef is, in London, 8 pounds, and, in Herefordshire, 12 Pounds; that a Stone of Wax is 8 Pounds, and a Stone of Glass 5. There are Words, in every Language, correspondent to the word Stone, in its more general Sense; but those Words cannot properly be used to render it in its Appropriated one. Was a Foreigner, who was translating a Piece of English, to meet with this Term, unless he was acquainted with the particular Appropriation of it, he could not himself understand his Author. And, should he render it into Latin, by the Word Lapis, he would no more convey any distinct Idea to his Reader, than a Reader of Latin would have, have, who should find it said, that such an one traveled decem, or, centum Lapides, and not know that Lapis, in such a Connection, was Appropriated to fignify a Roman Mile: And he could yet have no exact notion of the Distance, unless he knew that a Roman Mile consisted of 1000 Paces; and also, the precise Measure of a Roman Pace.

The Application is obvious; That, should any of the Appropriations of the Hebrew, and Greek Words, in the facred Writings, not be rightly understood, or not be duly attended to by a Translator, the true Sense and Meaning of the Writer would not be conveyed by his Version.

We are told Gen. 18.6. That Abraham ordered Sarab to make ready three DIND of fine Meal; which is not improperly translated three Meafures; but, by this we are not informed how much a שמה or מאה contained: only that, from hence, we may well conclude that it was no very large Quantity: and also we may the better understand this Term when we meet with it in other Places, as, 1 Sam. 25.18. 2 Kings 7.1,16. But the Words, by which Weights and Measures are described in Scripture, have in general no other Signification, and therefore do not here properly fall under our Confideration.

That several Words are used both in common and appropriated Senses, in all Languages, is what is well known to every Reader. And that several Words that are so used, in the original Language of the Scripture, have not been rightly rendered, or not rightly understood: That sometimes, the common Sense of them hath been given, or taken, where the Appropriated was intended; and the Appropriated instead of the Common, will be sufficiently shewn in the following Instances.

ו. כבוד יהוה The Glory of the Lord, in the more common Signification of the Words, conveys to us an Idea of the sublime Majesty of the most high God, as Psal.104.31. "The Glory of the "Lord shall endure for ever." Hab.2.14. "The "Earth shall be filled with the Knowledge " of the Glory of the Lord, &c. &c." But, when we read, Exod. 16.7. "In the Morning ye shall "see the Glory of the Lord:" and 1.10. that "When they looked toward the Wilderness, the "Glory of the Lord appeared in a Cloud." And 24.16. that "The Glory of the Lord abode upon "Mount Sinai: "And y.17. that "The Sight of " the Glory of the Lord was like devouring Fire." And v. 40. that " The Glory of the Lord filled "the Tabernacle, so that Moses was not able to enter." And Ezek. 10.4. that "The Glory of Lord went up from the Cherub, and stood over "the Threshold of the House." We cannot but be convinced, that The Glory of the Lord, in its appropriated Sense, fignified, and was understood to mean, A bright luminous Appearance, in the Likeness of a Flame of Fire. And now, though a literal Translation of the Words, into English, is as proper as the Words themselves were in the Original; yet, without attending to the particular appropriated Sense of them, we should not so plainly see the Propriety of the Expression, Luke 2.9. "The Glory of the Lord shone round about "them." Nor that in Rev. 21.23. "The City had no Need of the Sun, neither of the Moon to shine in it; for the Glory of the Lord did " lighten

" lighten it." From whence we learn, that there is a Light independent of the Sun and Moon, that may enlighten a terrestrial Globe: And this shews us, how trifling the Objections are, which have been made against Moses's Account of the Order of the Creation, from his having mentioned, that "On the first Day God said, Let there be Light; and there was Light:" and afterwards telling us, that the Sun and Moon were not created till the fourth Day. What! Light without the Sun! fay the modern Philosophical Free-thinkers; we will not believe it. The antient Opposers of Revelation, who were not willing to make any Objections to it, but what had some Shew of Reason, never went about to contradict the Truth of what St. Paul so frequently, and so publickly declared; and for the Truth of which he appealed to several Eye-witnesses of the Fact; That, at Mid-day, he saw a Light from Heaven, above the Brightness of the Sun, shining round about him, and them which journeyed with him. — But, what is matter of Fact, attested by ever so many Witnesses, to the enlightned Free-thinker? The truth of the Words, both of God and Man, must be determined by his unerring Reason!

2. The primary Signification of proper and the Dual and the Plural of the Word property, was Days: but it must be apparent, from several Passages, that these Words were also appropriated to signify a particular Number of Days, or a limited Time: And I am almost fully perswaded, that this Word sometimes signified two Days, sometimes a Week, and sometimes a Year. The Disference of the Pronunciation might determine in which which Sense it was, at any Time, used, though we may not now be able to ascertain in what Manner.

That this Word was used to signify two Days is evident from Numb. 11.19. Where Moses is ordered to say unto the People, "Ye shall not eat "Flesh one Day, nor two Days, nor sive Days, "nor ten Days, nor twenty Days, but even a "whole Month." Exod. 16.29. "The Lord giveth you on the fixth Day the Bread of two "Days." And here we may observe, that the Dual, or Plural of some Numerals are used in the same Manner. It is well known to every Hebrew Reader, that as your signifies Ten, so your signifies twice Ten, or Twenty: And that, as signifies one Thousand; so your signifies one Thousand; so unless it be particularly limited by some other Numeral, signifies two Thousand; as Numb. 35.5.— Josh. 3.4.—2 Kings 18.23, &c.

That the Plural of Dy fignifies a Week, is not so apparent, as that it fignifies two Days, and a Year. As a Week seems to have been an original Division of Time, from the Institution of the Sabbath, mentioned Gen. 2.3. we might well expect, that there should be a proper Term to express it by: and we find it distinguished by the Word yow, Gen. 29.27. — Lev. 12.5. — Dan. 9.24. Yet I cannot but be of Opinion, that or is made Use of to express it Gen. 24.55. "Let the Damsel abide with "us a Week or ten Days, after that she shall go." And Gen. 40.4. "Pharaoh's Butler and Baker "were a Week under Confinement." That it does not here mean Two Days is evident; for Joseph had taken Notice of their Countenances before he faid unto them, "Wherefore look ye so fadly "To-day?" And when he explained to them the Purport of their Dreams, he told them that it would be yet Three Days before they should be taken out of Prison. — And, probably, it may have the same Signification Numb. 9. 22. "Whe-"ther it was a Week, or a Month, or a Year, that the Cloud continued upon the Tabernacle, the Children of Ifrael Journied not." See Neb.

I. 4.

That the Word fignifies a Year, is not only confirmed by the last quoted Passage, where is made Use of to express two different Spaces of Time, (as it might properly do, if it was distinguished by a different Pronuntiation:) But it is also undeniably evident from 1 Sam. 2.19. "His " Mother made Samuel a little Coat, and brought "it to him from Year to Year, when she came " up with her Husband to offer the yearly Sa-" crifice." But this is a Point, not at all in Doubt, and therefore need not here be enlarged upon. The Reader may refer to Exod. 13.10.—Lev. 25. 29. — Judg. 17. 10, &c.

What particular Time may be alluded to by the Term מקץ ימים Gen. 4. 3. when Cain and A-bel came to make their Offerings to the Lord, may still remain a Matter of Enquiry: though, from the foregoing Observations, I am inclined to think, that it was at some more solemn annual Season, that God had appointed unto them.

3. The general and original Import of the Word אשרה was a Wood or a Grove; as we learn from the Order which God gave, Deut. 16. 21. "Thou shalt not plant thee a (Wood or a) Grove

"of any Sort of Trees near unto the Altar of the "Lord thy God." But, it must evidently appear that this Word had another appropriated Sense: Because we read I Kings 14. 23. "They built "them high Places, and Images, and Groves, on every high Hill and under every green Tree." And 2 Kings 17.10. "They set them up Images and Groves in every high Hill, and under every green Tree." From hence it appears, That the Reason of the above mentioned Prohibition was, because the Companites had used to erect their Ibecause the Canaanites had used to erect their Idols, or Oratories near to Woods or Groves; That the Israelites had followed their Idolatrous Practices; and that אשרה in the two Places last quoted, must mean an Idol or an Oratory, erected for Idolatrous Purposes: And that it was frequently used in this Sense, will appear from many other Passages: Exod. 34.13. "Ye shall destroy their Altars, "break down their Images, and demolish their אשרים) Groves, but, surely, more properly their) Oratories.— Judg. 6.25. The Order that was given to Gideon appears to be, "Throw down the Al-" tar of Baal that thy Father hath, and (not, cut " down the Grove that is by it, but) demolish the "Oratory that is over it."—I Kings 14.15. "The "Lord shall smite Israel, — because they have "made them Oratories, provoking the Lord to "Anger." wy is a Verb which cannot well be applied to a Grove.— 2 Kings 18.34. "Hezekiah "removed the high Places, brake the Images, and demolished the Oratories."—21.3. "Manasseh built up again the high Places, which Hezekiah "his Father had destroyed, and he reared up Altars for Baal, and made an Oratory.

1.7. "And he set the graven Image of the Ora-" tory in the House of the Lord. - 23.4. " Jo-" fiah commanded Hilkiah to bring forth all the "Vessels that were made for Baal, and for the "Oratory." — 1.6. "And he brought out the "Oratory from the House of the Lord." — ½.7.
"And the Women wove Hangings for the Oratory." *.14. "And he brake in Pieces the Images, and de-"molished the Oratories, and filled their Places with "the Bones of Men." These Instances, without enumerating more, sufficiently point out the appropriated Sense of these Words. And

4. As the Singular אשרה and the Plural אשרים fignified Temples, or Oratories for Idolatrous Purposes; so the Plural אשרות was Appropriated to fignify some of the Idols or Images, that were worshipped in those Temples. Judg. 3.7. "The "Children of Israel served Baalim and Ashe-"ROTH:" for so I think it ought to be translated, rather than Groves. — 2 Chron. 19.3. "Thou "hast taken away the Idols (or, ASHEROTH) out "of the Land." — 33.3. "Manasseb reared up "Altars for Baalim, and made ASHEROTH, and " worshipped the Host of Heaven." From these Passages I am inclinable to conclude, that Baalim was a general Term for those Idols that were reckoned of the male Kind, and Asheroth for those of the Female. And I am perswaded, that and אשרות were Words of the fame Meaning, though the first was more commonly made Use of to express the Female Idols in former Times: for thus I understand 1 Sam. 7.3. "Put away the strange Gods, (or the Male Idols) and ASHTAROTH (strange Goddesses) from a-mong you." — y.4. "Then the Children of " Ifrael "Ifrael did put away Baalim and ASHTAROTH, "and ferved the Lord only." From hence we learn, that Baalim fignifies those that are called frange Gods in the former Verse; and consequently, that Ashtaroth, must mean Idols of a different Kind.—I Sam. 12.10. "We have sinned, because "we have forsaken the Lord, and served Baalim

" and Ashtaroth." See Judg. 10.6, &c.

I should not omit to mention, that Ashtaroth, when it is not joined with Baalim, sometimes refers to a particular Idol, which is called the Goddess of the Zidonians, I Kings 11.33. And, their Abomination, 2 Kings 23.13.— In Judg. 2.13. where we have the first Account of the general Corruption of the Children of Israel to Idolatry, after the Death of Joshua; we are told, that they began with first paying their Devotions to the two principal Idols, Male and Female, the one called Baal, and the other Ashtaroth: From the Plural of Baal, all kinds of Idols of the Male Kind, were called Baalim; and because Ashtaroth had a Feminine and Plural Termination, the Name was applied to all Female Idols.

5. The Word is constantly in our Verfion rendered a Bank, or a Mount, as if it had no other Signification: And, indeed, I am of Opinion that it hath but one; but think it to be different from that, in which our Translators understood it; and that it means an Engine of War, made Use of to sling Stones, or any heavy Body, into, or against a besieged City. But, if this be the Sense of it, it hath been mistaken by most Translators: The Verb it is commonly connected with is jobb; from whence, in the Latin Versions, we have, Fundere, effundere, acervare, comportare, jacere, circumjacere, extruere, congerere, mittere in circuitu Aggerem; circumdare Munitiones; ponere & tendere Insidias; cingere & circumdare Vallum; effundere Virtutem; & collocare Exercitum. The Hebrew Verb, indeed, most properly signifies, to pour out; and therefore may be applied either to the pouring, out of Vessels, Earth or Rubbish, to raise a Mount; or it may, surely, be applied to the pouring of Stones out of an Engine, without at all straining a Metaphor. However, I shall produce the ten Passages where this Word is used, that the Reader may pass his own Judgment whether it signifies a Mount, or an Engine.

and they played (or poured out) an Engine against the City; (Version, cast up a Bank;) and it stood in the Trench, and all the People that were with Joab, battered the Wall to throw it down.

2 Kings 19.32. Sennacherib shall not come into this City, nor shoot an Arrow there, nor come before it with Shield, nor play an Engine (Verfion, cast a Bank) against it.

Isa. 37. 33. A Repetition of the foregoing Verse. Jer. 6.6. Hew ye down Trees, and play an Engine (Version, cast a Mount) against Jerusalem. Jer. 32. 24. Behold, the Engines (Version, Jer. 32.24. Behold, the Engines (Version, Mounts) are come into the City to take it, and the City is given into the Hands of the Chaldeans.

Jer. 33.4. The Houses of this City, and the Houses of the Kings of Judah, are thrown down by the Engines, (Version, Mounts,) and by the Sword.

Ezek. 4.2. Lay Siege against it, and build a Fort against it, and play an Engine (Version, cast a Mount) against it, &c.

Ezek. 17. 17. Neither shall Pharaoh - make for him in the War, by playing Engines, (Version, casting up Mounts,) and building Forts.

Ezek. 21.22. To lift up the Voice with Shouting; to appoint battering Rams against the Gates; to play an Engine, (Version, cast a Mount,) and to build a Fort.

Dan. 11. 15. The King of the North shall come, and play an Engine, (Version, cast up a Mount,) and take the most fenced Cities.

The antient Versions of these Passages may readily be compared in the Polyglott; from whence it will appear, that our Translators were led to render this Word a Mount, or a Bank, by the more general Concurrence of those Versions, in affixing that Sense to it. But, if the Reader shall think it could not properly be faid, that "The

"Mounts are come into the City;" or that "The "Houses are thrown down by the Mounts;" and finds that fuch Engines of War, as we have mentioned, are applicable to all the above cited Passages; he may be led to confider, that the Versions are but little to be depended upon; and that it is necessary to consult and compare the Words of the Original, and attend to the Context, in order rightly to understand the Language of Scripture.

6. The Sense of 2 Sam. 1.18. seems to have been entirely mistaken, for Want of considering the particular Appropriation of the Word קשת; "Also he bade them teach the Children of Ju-" dah the Use of the Bow: Behold, it is written in "the Book of Jasher." It is evident from the Context, that what David commanded to be taught to the Children of Judah, was written יעל כפר הישר: which Words either mean, the Book of some particular Person, or, the authentic standard Copy of what was commanded to be taught them. - But, this could not be the Use of the Bow; the Use whereof is so often before mentioned to be known and practifed; Gen. 27.3.—48. 22.—Josh. 24.12. Nor, indeed, is it said, in the Original, that he commanded to teach them the Use of the Bow, but only קשת, that is, the Bow; which was a Term that David appropriated to fignify the Threnodia, or mourning Song, which he had composed upon the Death of Saul and Jonathan; and which he called by that Name, from one particular Paffage in it, y. 22. "Without the Blood of the Sol-" diers, without the Fat of the Mighty, the Bow " of Jonathan returned not back." A Copy of the whole was written in the Book of Jasher (as we call it,) and this he commanded to be taught to the Children of Judah.

And here we may observe, that the whole Song of Moses, which is recorded Exod. 15.1. is referr'd to, 1.21. by the first Words thereof: For, after Moses and the Children, or Sons of Israel had sung this Song unto the Lord, Miriam, and the Women answered them; "Sing ye to the Lord, "for he hath triumphed gloriously; the Horse and his Rider hath he thrown into the Sea:" that is, They repeated the whole Song, which begins with these Words, in the same Manner as the Men had done before them.

7. I apprehend the appropriated Meaning of the Word or to have been mistaken, when it is rendered Sodomite; 1 Kings 14.24. — 15.12. — 2 Kings 23.7. If קדשה means a Whore, Deut. 23. 17. which feems to be sufficiently confirmed from Gen. 38.21, 22. קרש must, most probably, in the same Verse, mean a Whoremaster, or Fornicator: unless the Terms may more precisely be applied to those Persons, of both Sexes, who prostituted themselves for Hire. And these Terms may have been applied to them, as Persons who had consecrated themselves to the lewd Service of some impure Deity; which was a common Practice among the Idolatrous Nations. — The antient Vér-fions give no Countenance to our calling this a Sodomite. Nor do I see any Grounds for charging the Israelites with being so frequently, and so notoriously guilty of Sodomitical Practices.

8. The Word בליות, in its primary Sense, signissed the Kidneys; as appears from Exod. 29.13. Lev. 3.4,10, &c. But it is frequently translated the Reins; when, in its appropriated Sense, it must evidently appear to mean a Man's Inward Thoughts, or Conscience, as Pfal. 7.9. The Righteous God trieth the Hearts and Reins. - 16.7. My Reins reprove me in the Night-season. — 26.2. Examine me, O Lord, and prove me, try my Reins and my Heart. — 73.21. Thus my Heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my Reins. — Fer. 11.20. O Lord of Hosts, that triest the Reins and the Heart. — 12.2. Thou art near in their Mouth, but far from their Reins .- 17.10. I the Lord fearch the Heart, I try the Reins. - 20. 12. O Lord, that feest the Reins and the Heart.

A judicious Reader will not mistake the Meaning in these, and such like Passages; but whether it would not have a better Effect upon the more Ignorant, to render this Word Thoughts, or Conscience, I shall leave to the Reader's Judgment.

9. In the same Manner קרב which, in general, means the inward Parts, or Intestines, is very frequently used to signify the Mind, or Conscience, as Psal. 5.9. Their inward Part is very Wickedness. - 49.10. Their inward Thought is, that their Houses shall continue for ever. Here the Translators have added Thought, and given the true Sense of the Word. — 62.4. They bless with their Mouth, but they curse inwardly. -Jer. 31.33. I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts.

There are other Words by which the Thoughts, Mind, and Conscience, are referr'd to in Scripture, and which might, perhaps, with great Propriety, have been so rendered; but the Translators have chosen to give a more literal Version. Psal. 51.6. Behold, thou defirest Truth בטחות in the inward Parts; and not in the bidden Part thou shalt make me to know Wisdom. And I cannot but think it remarkable, as I have formerly observed in the Preface to The Index to the Bible, That though the Duty of keeping a Conscience void of Offence is much infifted on, the Means directed to, and Motives urged, in several Texts of Scripture, yet the Word Conscience is seldom to be found; and not even once in our Version of the Books of the Old Testament.

The same Expressions that were made Use of in the Old, were adopted by the Writers of the New

New Testament, Luke 11.39. Your inward Part is full of Ravening and Wickedness. - Rev. 2. 23. I am he, which fearcheth the Reins and Hearts.

וס. That אחרית, in an appropriated Sense, means The Future State; — That רפאים is the Word, by which the departed Souls are spoken of; — That שאול is the Residence of the Miserable; and of the Blessed, I have endeavoured to shew at large, in a Sermon, lately published, preached at the Episcopal Visitation at Derby; in order to prove, that the Rewards and Punishments, that would await Men in an after Life, were the great Sanctions of the Law of Moses: and it would be tedious, here to repeat the Arguments, which evince fuch Appropriations. The principal Texts referr'd to upon the 1st Word, are Numb. 23.10. Deut. 8.16. Prov. 23.17.—Upon the 2d, Psal. 88.10. Prov. 2.18. Isa. 14.9.—Upon the 3d, Deut. 32. 22. Psal. 9.17. Isa. 5.14. And upon the 4th, Pfal. 139.8. Amos 9.2. &c. &c.

11. That there are several Words in the New Testament used in peculiar and appropriated Senses, is well known to the learned: but, whilst they are still rendered according to their more common Acceptation, they do not convey the Sense intended, to the more ignorant Reader. For Example; Πλεονεξια, in general, means Covetousness, or an inordinate affection for Riches; as when our Saviour faith, Luke 12.15. "Take heed and be-" ware of Covetousness; for a Man's Life consist-

" eth not in the Abundance of the Things which

"he possesseth." But, when we read, Eph. 5.3. "Fornication and all Uncleanness or Covetousness,

"let it not once be named amongst you;" it must must give us to understand, that the Word here means, an inordinate Love of, or Desire of enjoying some particular Person: amounting to that Lust spoken of Mat. 5.28. "Whosoever looketh on a Woman, to sust after her, hath committed Adultery with her already in his Heart." And, understanding the Word in this Sense, we come to the Knowledge of the true Meaning of that Passage, Col. 3.5. "Mortify your Members which are upon the Earth, Fornication, Uncleanness, inordinate Affection, evil Concupiscence, and

" Covetousness, which is Idolatry."

12. The general Signification of Nυμφη is a Bride: See John 3.29. Rev. 18.23, &c. But this Word was also Appropriated to fignify a Daughter-in-Law: and the Meaning of it, from the Context of Mat. 10.35. and Luke 12.53. is made clear to every Reader. The Greek Language had νυος, and εννυος to express this Relation by: but νυμφη appears to have been made Use of by the Apostles, as the most proper Translation of the Hebrew γγρ which also fignifies both a Bride, and a Daughter-in-Law. The former, Ifa. 49.18.—61.10.—62.5. Jer. 2.32. And the latter, Gen. 11.31.—38.11. i Sam. 4.19. Ruth 1.6. &c.

11.31. — 38.11. I Sam. 4.19. Ruth 1.6. &c.

13. Amaiosun is a general Term for Righteousness, in its most extensive Sense. But when it is said, Rom. 1.17. That, in the Gospel the Righte"ousness of God is revealed from Faith to Faith:"
We must thereby understand, that Righteousness signifies the Manner, Method, or Means of Justification; and, that the true Import of this Passage is, "In the Gospel, God's Method of Justification by Faith, is revealed to our Faith:" As the

I 3 Apostle

Apostle says, Gal. 3.8. "The Scripture, fore-"feeing that God would justify the Heathen "through Faith, preached before the Gospel unto Abraham." Now what saith the Scripture? Gen. 15.6. " Abraham believed in the Lord, and "he counted it to him for Righteousness:" i. e. for Justification; And therefore (saith the Apostle Rom. 3.28.) we conclude, "That a Man is justified by Faith without the Deeds of the "Law." The Word Righteousness, considered in this View, teacheth us how rightly to understand those Passages, Rom. 3.21. " Now God's Method " of Justification without the Law, is manifested, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets; even the Method of Divine Justification by "Faith in Jesus Christ;" and, Rom. 10.3. "There-" fore they perish, who, being ignorant of God's "Method of Justification, go about to establish "their own Method of Justification: for Christ is the End of the Law, for Justification, to every one that believeth." And, without farther enlarging upon this Head, I shall refer the Reader, who would more accurately examine the Import of this Word, and the Doctrine conveyed thereby, to the Consideration of Rom. 3.5. - 4.11, 13. — 5.17. — 10.10. — Gal. 2.21. — 5.5. -Phil.3.9. &c.

These instances may be thought sufficient to shew, that though several Words are used both in a general and an appropriated Sense; yet the Context will frequently point out the true and determinate Meaning of the Words; which, when so discovered, will be a Key to several other Passages. And that, though they are used in some peculiar culiar and appropriated Senses, widely different from the general and original Meaning of them; yet they are not used in so vague and unlimited a Manner, as necessarily to occasion any very great Obscurity.

SECTION XXV.

IT is contrary to a generally received Opinion to suppose, That the Words in the Hebrew Language are used with as great, if not with greater Propriety and Precision, than those of any other. But as I am persuaded of the Truth of this, by the Comparison of several Versions with the Original; and, as I impute the Inaccuracies of the Versions, in many Places, to the Want of attending to this Observation; I shall lay before the Reader some Remarks, which may probably induce him, not readily to admit the Charge of Barrenness or Uncertainty, too frequently imputed to the Hebrew Language, upon general Affertions only.

ו. In the fourth Chapter of Genesis, the two Words ארץ and ארץ are frequently made Use of. They are Words that have two different, and determinate Significations, and are here always used with the greatest Propriety and Precision: ארץ to fignify the whole Globe of the Earth; as it is Gen.1.1. "In the Beginning God created the "Heavens and the Earth:" (yet, it frequently is used to express some particular Country or District, as the Land of Canaan, the Land of Moab, the Land of Nod, &c.) And אדמה to express the Surface of the Earth, or that Part of it which admits of Cultivation. Yet they are both generally rendered in the Greek by In, and in the Latin by Terra. The English Translators have made Use of the two proper Words, by which these ought to have been uniformly rendered; yet they have not regularly observed the Distinction; and for Want thereof, the true Sense is not so clearly conveyed, as it might have been. In the 2d Verse, they have rightly rendered ארמה, and faid, "That Cain was a Tiller of the Ground." And y. 3. " That Cain brought of the Fruit of the "Ground an Offering unto the Lord." And $.10. "The Voice of thy Brother's Blood crieth unto " me from the Ground." Yet, in the very next Verse, for Want of rendering the same Word in the same Manner, they have altered the Sense of the Expression, and introduced an Impropriety: " And now thou art cursed from the Earth, which " hath opened her Mouth to receive thy Brother's "Blood from thy Hand." Cain could not properly be faid to be curfed from the Earth, when he was yet to continue long upon it, build Cities, and see a numerous Posterity: But, he might properly be faid to be cursed from the Ground; which, in this Connexion, means that Portion of Land, which Cain dwelt upon, and cultivated; being the very Spot of Ground, where he had flain his Brother. And, that this was the Ground meant, is evident from the next Verse; where God faith, " If thou shouldest till this Ground, it " should not henceforth yield unto thee its "Strength: A Fugitive and a Vagabond shalt "thou be upon the Earth:" which is mentioned by the proper Term ארץ: And observe Cain's Reply, v.14. Behold, thou drivest me out this Day (not, from the Face of the Earth, as we have it translated, but) from the Face of this Ground; and from thy Face shall I be hid: A Fugitive and a Vagabond shall I be upon the Earth. Upon some Part of the Earth Cain must inhabit, whilst he lived; and we are told, v.16. That Cain went out from the Presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the Land of Nod. The Distinction of the Words may very clearly be feen in these Passages: and that the Scripture-Writers have been generally correct, in using them according to their original and appropriated Senses, might be confirmed by in-numerable Instances. Gen. 1.25. The Beasts, in general, are called the Beasts of the Earth; and in the same Verse is mentioned, whatsoever creepeth upon the Ground: but in our Translation no such Distinction is taken Notice of .- In Gen. 2.6. the Words are rightly rendered, "There went up a "Mist from the Earth, and watered the whole "Face of the Ground." But in the Greek, or Latin, or any other Version that I have had the Opportunity of confulting, no fuch Distinction is made: fo that the Precision, observable in the Original, is not so much as suspected by a Reader of those Versions.

2. Monf. Boyer, upon the Word Laver, observes, that Laver les Mains, and Laver du Linge, are both proper Expressions: and any Kind of Washing is expressed in the Greek by Azw, and in the Latin by Lavo: but, in the Hebrew Language, there are two Words, to express the different Kinds of washing; and they are always used with the strictest Propriety: Do to signify that Kind of washing, which pervades the Substance of the Thing washed, and cleanses it thoroughly; and rot to express that Kind of washing, which only cleanses the Surface of an hard Substance, which the Water cannot penetrate. The former is used Exod. 19.10. "Sanctify the People, and " let them wash their Cloaths." — Gen. 49.11.
" Judah washed his Garments in Wine, and his " Cloaths in the Blood of Grapes." Lev. 13.6. "The Person that was suspected of Leprosy, shall " wash his Cloaths, and be clean." — The latter is met with Gen. 18.4. Let a little Water be fetched, and wash your Feet. - 24.32. Laban gave the Man Water to wash his Feet. - Exod. 2.5. The Daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself in the River. — Deut. 21.6. The Elders of the City shall wash their Hands over the Heifer. I need not multiply Instances; the Words are frequently met with; and scarce any one can read the Original of Lev. 14.8, 9, without observing the Distinction. But upon looking back upon these Passages, and some others, where you is used, the Word appears particularly to signify the washing of the Body, or some Part of it: and, Lev. 9.14. it is used, when speaking of the washing of the Inwards and Legs of the Burnt-Offering. And if this be the appropriated Sense of it, yet hath the Hebrew Language another Word, whereby to express the washing of any other impenetrable Substance, which is now: Lev. 6.28. The Brasen Pot shall be scoured and rinsed in Water. - 15.12. Every Vessel of Wood shall be rinsed in Water. — 1 Kings 22.38. And they washed the Chariot in the Pool of Samaria; and they washed his Armour. They are all three used Lev. 15.11. to which I refer.

As our Language wants Words fo accurately and distinctly to express the different Kinds of washing, this Observation can be of no farther Use than to shew, that there is a greater Precision in the Hebrew Language, than is commonly imagined; and, that the Words are used with very great Propriety. But I must not omit to mention, that by a beautiful and strong Metaphor, David uses DI. 51.2,7. "Wash me thoroughly from mine Iniquity, and cleanse me from my Sin: Wash me, and I shall be whiter than Snow."

עבר 3. עבר fignifies To serve, in any Capacity; and עבר ארמה To till, or cultivate the Ground; and the Noun עבר in general, a Servant. But which is also frequently rendered to serve, fignifies peculiarly, To be in personal Attendance upon any one, and not in laborious Business. Gen. 39.4. Joseph found Favour in Potiphar's Sight; and he served him.—40.4. The Captain of the Guard charged Joseph with the chief Butler and Baker, and he served them. — Exod. 24.13. Joshua was Moses's Minister.—1 Kings 1. 4. Abishag minister-ed unto the King. In the two last Places, the Word is rightly rendered; and where we have Words, that will properly express the full Sense of the Original, they certainly ought to be made Use of, and the Verb new should never be translated, To serve; but, To minister unto, or attend upon: and the Noun, not a Servant, but a Minister, or, Attendant. See 2 Sam. 13.18. 2 Kings 4.43. - 6.15, &c. &c. 4. There is no observable Distinction betwixt the English Words, To kill, to slay, to smite, or to put to Death: and therefore they are promiscuously used to express the Meaning of six Hebrew Words, which I apprehend have, each ofthem, distinct Significations; and which are generally applied to describe the particular Circumstances referr'd to in the Manner, or End of kill-ing: which, if there be any just Grounds for such an Opinion, is a Precision not to be equaled in any other Language that I am acquainted with. I shall therefore submit to the Reader's Judgment, the Examination of the Grounds of my Opinion, that these different Hebrew Words have different, and peculiar Appropriations, which are generally observed through the whole Scriptures.

הרג To kill, appears to be a general Word, and to be expressive of all those, which either the antient or modern Versions make Use of to render the feveral Hebrew Words by: It will properly express the killing of a Man, or any other Creature, in any Manner, or upon any Occasion; as Gen. 4.8. Cain rose up against Abel his Brother, and slew him. — 12.12. The Egyptians will say, this is his Wise, and they will kill me. — Exod. 4.23. Behold, I will slay thy Son. — 23.7. The innocent and righteous flay thou not. — Lev. 20. 15. Ye shall flay the Beast. - Num. 31.7. They warred against the Midianites, and flew all the Males. — It would be tedious to recite more. From hence we see, that this general Word refers to wilful Murder, to judicial Destruction, to puting to Death by Form of Law, to the killing of a Beast; and to slaying in War: and in these several Senses it is very frequently used. The other Words seem to be more confined in their Significations.

מות To kill a Man. Gen. 18.25. That be far from thee, to flay the Righteous with the Wick-ed.—37.18. Foseph's Brethren conspired against him, to flay him.—42.37. Slay my two Sons, if I bring him not to thee.—Exod.16.3. To kill this whole Assembly with Hunger. - Numb. 35. 21. Or, in Enmity, smote him that he die; he shall furely be put to Death. From hence we see, this Word signifies to die, as well as to be put to Death: But I have not observed, that it is made Use of when speaking of putting to Death any Creature but Man.

נכה To kill in War. Gen. 32.11. I fear him, lest he come and smite me, and the Mother with the Children. — Josh. 7.5. The Men of Ai smote them, about thirty six Men. — 11.10 Joshua smote the King of Hazor with the Edge of the Sword. — 1 Sam. 17.4. I will smite thee, and take thine Head from thee. It is true, that frequently fignifies to fmite without killing; but when in these, and innumerable other Passages it implies Slaughter, it, I think, always fignifies kill-ing in War, as it is properly rendered Josh. 10. 20. Joshua made an end of slaying them with a very great Slaughter.

מבח To kill for Food. Gen. 43.16. Slay, and make ready; for these Men shall dine with me.-Exod. 22.1. If a Man steal an Ox, or a Sheep, and kill it, or sell it. - Deut. 28.31. Thine Ox shall be flain before thine Eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof. - Prov. 9.2. She hath killed her Beasts, the hath mingled her Wine, the hath furnished her Table. - I Sam. 25.11. Shall I take my Flesh, which I have killed for my Shearers? - The Noun, upon this account, fignifies a Cook. And I have have met with but two Exceptions to the Word's being always used with the strictest Propriety; and they are in the Poetical Books. Pfal. 37.16. and Lam. 2.21.

טחש To cut the Throat: or, To kill any thing in such a Manner as was appointed, in order to make them sit for Food, or Sacrifices; which was, by draining out all the Blood. The common Signification of the Word is, To squeese, drain, or pour out, as in Gen. 40.11. I took the Grapes, and pressed (or squeezed) them into Pharaoh's Cup. And, from thence, appropriated to signify that Manner of killing, by which all the Blood was drained from the Body. Gen. 22.10. Abraham stretched forth his Hand, and took the Knife to flay his Son.—Exod. 12.6. The whole Assembly of the Congregation shall kill the Lamb for the Passover in the Evening. — 29.11. Thou shalt kill the Bull before the Lord at the Door of the Tabernacle. — 1.16. Thou shalt flay the Ram.—
Num.11.22. Shall the Flocks and the Herds be flain for them to suffice them? - 1 Sam. 14.34. Bring hither every Man his Beeve, and every Man his Sheep, and flay them here and eat, and fin not against the Lord in eating with the Blood.

is a Chaldee Word, and used only in three Places: Job 13.15. Though he flay me, yet will I put my Trust in him. — 24.14. The Murderer rising with the Light, killeth the Poor and Needy. — Pfal.139.19. Surely, thou wilt flay the Wicked. From whence it appears, that the Signification of this Word is the same, as that of my above mentioned.

I believe, all Languages have Words whereby wilful Murder is distinguished from any other Kind of killing; and therefore whenever און is met with, it should certainly be rendered by such appropriated Words. I cannot but think it a very great Fault in our Version, to render Exod. 20.13. Thou shalt not kill; instead of, thou shalt do no Murder. - Num. 35.27. The Revenger of Blood shall kill the flayer; instead of, the Murderer. -Deut. 22. 26. As when a Man riseth against his Neighbour, and flayeth him, (instead of murdereth him;) even so is this Matter. — See Num. 35.6, 25, 26, 28. where we find Slayer instead of Murderer; which is properly inserted $1.16,17,18,19, 21,30, and 31. The same Fault is committed in many other places; as Deut. 4.2. Josh. 21.13. Judg. 20.4. 1 Kings 21.19. &c. &c.

From this view it must appear, that the English Version, by no means preserves the Distinctions observable in the Hebrew: neither, indeed, does any other Version: and therefore the Propriety of the Scripture Language can only be discovered, and judged of, by those who read the Original.

5. The Greek, Δομα and Δωρον; the Latin, Donum and Munus; and the English, Gift and Present, are scarcely distinguishable: and they are indiscriminately, and often very improperly, given as the Translation of מנחה, מתה, and שחד; which are Words that have different, peculiar, and appropriated Significations.

מחנה fignifies, a Gift, in general, Gen. 25.6. Abraham gave Gifts to the Sons of his Concub nes. — Lev. 23.38. Besides your Gifts, and befides your Vows, - Numb. 18.6. The Levites are given as a Gift for the Lord. — 2 Chro. 21. 3. Jehoshaphat gave his Sons great Gifts. — Ezek. 20. 31. When ye offer your Gifts, ye pollute yourselves. — Prov. 19.6. Every Man is a Friend to him that giveth Gifts.

הנחה fignifies a Gift, Present, or Offering, made by an Inferior, in order to obtain Favour. Gen. 4.3. Cain brought an Offering unto the Lord. - 4.4. The Lord had Respect to Abel, and to his Offering. — 32.13. A Present for Esau his Brother. — 1.20. I will appeale him with the Present, that goeth before me. — See 33.10. — 43.11. Take down the Man a Present .- See 1. 15, 25, 26. — Judg. 3.15. They sent a Present unto Eglon. — See y. 17, 18. — 1 Sam. 10.27. The Children of Belial brought Saul no Presents. — 1 Chro. 16.29. Bring an Offering, and come before the Lord. — 18.6. The Syrians brought Gifts to David .- 2 Chro. 32.23. Many brought Gifts unto the Lord. From this Extract it appears, that the Word מנחה properly fignifies an Oblation, or Offering, when it relates to God; and a Tribute, or a Present to obtain Favour, when it relates to Man: and, had it been constantly so rendered in our Version, the Sense of it would have been properly conveyed to the English Reader.

fignifies a Bribe. And it does not sufficiently convey the Idea intended, to render it a Gift, a Present, or a Reward. Exod. 23.8. Thou shalt take no Gift; for a Gift blindeth the Wise, and perverteth the Words of the Righteous.—

Deut. 10.17. The Lord your God regardeth not Persons, nor taketh Reward.— 27. 25. Cursed be he, that taketh Reward to slay an innocent Person.

sect. XXV. REMARKS. 145

1 Kin. 15.19. Behold, I have fent thee a Prefent of Silver and Gold; come, break thy League with Baasha. — 2 Kin. 16.8. Abaz fent a Present to the King of Assyria. — Psal. 15.5. He that taketh not Reward against the Innocent. — Prov. 6.35. A jealous Man will not rest content, though thou givest many Gifts.—17.23. A wicked Man taketh a Gift out of the Bosom, to pervert the Ways of Judgment. — Isa. 1.23. Thy Princes follow after Rewards — 5.23. They justify the Wicked for Reward. — Now, does not this Word as evidently mean a Bribe, in all these Places, as it does where it is so translated? I Sam. 8.3. Psal. 26.11. Isa. 33.5. And I know of no Passage, where it can be properly understood in any other Sense.

be properly understood in any other Sense.

6. The Greek, Πτωχος and Πενης; the Latin, Pauper and Mendicus; and the English, Poor and Needy; are scarcely so distinguishable, as to convey separate Ideas: and therefore, I think, not capable of being adequate Translations of the Hebrew Words אביון; which appear to me to have their peculiar Appropriations:

יש to fignify a Person under any oppressive or afflictive Circumstances what soever. Lev. 19. 10. Thou shalt leave the Gleanings for the Poor and Stranger. — Deut. 24. 14. Thou shalt not oppress an hired Servant that is poor and needy: Here needy is expressed by אבין, and, as we shall see afterwards, with the utmost Propriety. — Psal. 9.

12. God forgetteth not the Cry of the humble: In our former Version it was, I think more properly, The complaint of the Poor. — 9. 18. The Expectation of the Poor shall not perish for ever.

K

- 12.5. For the Oppression of the Poor, for the Sighing of the needy, will I arise. — 22.24. He hath not despised the Affliction of the afflict. ed. -25.16. I am desolate and afflicted. - 34.6. The Poor crieth, and the Lord heareth him; yea, and delivereth him out of all his Troubles. — 35.
10. Delivereth the poor and needy אבין, from him that spoileth him. - 37.14. To cast down the Poor and needy אביון . - 69.33. The Lord heareth the Poor, and despiseth not his Prisoners. —70. 5. I am poor and needy אביון. — 72.4. He shall judge (or vindicate) the Poor; and save the needy אביון. — אָרון. He shall deliver the needy אביון, the poor also, and him that hath no Helper.— 88.15. I am afflicted and ready to dye .- 140.12. The Lord will maintain the Cause of the afflicted, and the right of the Poor אביון. — Ifa.10.2. To turn aside the needy 57 from Judgment, and to take away the Right from the Poor. From this Extract we may observe, that Poor and Needy are very often mentioned together, but as Persons in different Circumstances; though both of them in unhappy ones; that 'w is sometimes rendered afflicted, and might properly be so in all Places; and by that Means, be distinguished from the other Words, that are also rendered Poor and Needy.

7 One, not in affluent Circumstances. Exod. 22.
3. Thou shalt not countenance a poor Man in his Cause. — Lev. 14.21. If he be poor, and cannot get so much, he shall take one Lamb. — Psal.
72.13. He shall spare the Poor and needy אביון —82.4. Deliver the Poor and needy אביון.—113.
7. He raiseth up the Poor out of the Dust; and lifteth think.

lifteth the needy אבין out of the Dunghil. — Prov. 22. 22. Rob not the Poor, because he is poor. — Isa. 14.30. The Poor shall feed, and the needy אבין shall lie down in Safety.—Amos 4.1. Hear this, ye that oppress the poor, and crush the needy אבין 8.6. To buy the poor for Silver, and the needy אבין for a pair of Shoes.— Here we see, that אבין is distinguished from אבין as well as from אבין, which may include any kind of Affliction; whereas אבין implies a Share of Want, in all these Passages; whether a greater, or a less Share, than who, may be a Question from Prov. 28.3. The poor Man that oppresseth the Poor. 37, is like a sweeping Rain, which leaveth no Food: We may be inclinable to think the Oppressor the greater Man of the two; but, from the Riots we now see, upon account of the dearness of Corn, we find that the poorest Men may oppress their Superiors; and this remarkably justifies the Comparison, which the wise Man here makes. But, which Word the richer Man is mentioned by, let the Reader judge, from a comparison of the Texts. 2 Sam. 12. See the Parable of the poor Man's Lamb. — Pfal. 82.3. Defend the Poor 57 and Fatherless; do Justice to the afflicted and needy. — Prov. 14. 20. The Poor is hated, (or defpised,) even of his own Neighbour. — 17. 5. Whoso mocketh the Poor, reproacheth his Maker. — 18.23. The Poor useth Intreaties. — 19.7. All the Brethren of the Poor do hate (or despise) him.— 28.27. He that giveth to the Poor, shall not lack. From this View I am inclinable to think, that wo fignifies a Person in Want, in the very next Degree to אביון One in abject Poverty, who is chiefly, or altogether supported by the Charity, or Bounty, of other Persons. We have above taken Notice in what Manner it is used with y and אבי and I shall need to refer to but sew other Passages, sufficiently to shew the peculiar Signification of this Word. Exod. 23.11. Thou shalt let the Land rest, that the Poor of thy People may eat. — Esther 9.22. Sending Gifts to the Poor. — 1 Sam. 2.8. He raiseth up the Poor און out of the Dust, and lifteth up the Beggar from the Dunghill. — Psal. 49.2. contrasts, high and low, Rich and Poor.—107.41. He poureth Contempt on Princes, and setteth up the Poor on high. — 112.9. He hath distributed, and given to the Poor. — 132.15. I will satisfy her Poor with Bread.

The Appeal lies now fairly before the Reader. And, if it shall appear, that these Words have such Appropriations and Distinctions; and that they are generally used with great Propriety; it points out a Precision in the Hebrew Language, unknown to any other: and consequently, the Scriptures can only be read, to the best Advantage, in the Original.

So far as any Language is really defective, the Translators cannot be to blame. But we have four Words, that would in some Measure correspond to these Hebrew ones, were they properly made Use of; afflicted, poor, indigent, and necessitous, might perhaps suit them as well as any other: But, whether the most proper Word was chosen or not; if the same English Word was but always put for the same Hebrew one, a distinct Idea would, at least, be preserved.

7. In the beginning of the Psalms we read, Happy is the Man that doth not walk in the Counsel of the ungodly השנים, nor stand in the Way of Sinners השאים, nor sit in the Seat of the scornful, לצים. The Gradation of these Words is very observable; and from hence we are given to understand, that a Man might be שע, an ungodly, or unrighteous Man, who was not מוח a Righteousness constituted a Man ywn; and therefore, at the Conclusion of the first Psalm we read, The Lord approveth the Way of the righteous: but the Way of the ungodly shall perish.

Ungodliness, or Unrighteousness might be committed in many different Ways and Manners: and they are expressed by several different He-brew Words, distinguishing the Nature of the Crimes refer'd to; though not easy to be ascertained: And the Reader may, probably, be induced to think with me, that no Work would be more useful, for illustrating and ascertaining the Import of the Hebrew Words, than one upon the Plan of the Abbé Girard, in a Book entitled, Synonymes François: In one Article of which, he undertakes to point out the Distinctions between Faute, Defaute, Defectuosite, Vice, Imperfection, Crime, Peche, Delit, and Forfait. And it might, perhaps, be attempted with as good, or better Success, to shew the Difference betwixt

The Words זבח a Sacrifice; קרבן an Oblation or Offering; אשת a Burnt-Offering; אשת a Sacrifice by Fire; מנחה a Bread, or, Meat-Offering; מאר a Sin-Offering; אשם a Trespass-Offering; מונותה a Wave-Offering; and הרומה an Heave-Offering, are particularly distinguished one from the other, in the beginning of Leviticus. And the Derivations of the Words confirm the Defign of their Appropriations: And yet, when these Words are met with in other Places, these obvious Distinctions are not always observed in the Versions. Would the proposed extent of these Remarks admit of it, I might greatly enlarge upon this Article: But, the Design of these Sheets is only to prove, in general, that there are several Inaccuracies and Improprieties in the Versions, to point out the Causes of them, and, to shew in what Manner they are capable of being removed. And enough, furely, hath been said upon this Head, to shew that the same Hebrew Word should continue to be rendered in the same Manner, in any Version; unless some evident appropriated Sense had been affixt to it, which sometimes makes a Variation necessary.

SECTION XXVI.

THE Names of Places are frequently given from the Circumstances of their Situation; or fome other Particulars, to which the Name might bear some Allusion. As Bethel obtained that Name, because there was an House of God erected in that Place. The Names of Persons, likewise, were given upon Account of some Circumstances attending their Births, or some other occasional Peculiarity; as appears from the Rea-fons given of the Names of the twelve Patriarchs, Gen. 29. and 30. But, though Names were originally given from common Appellatives, yet, they ought never to be translated as Appellatives. We have the Names of Easton, Weston, Norton and Sutton. K 4

Sutton, given, from their Situation with Respect to some other Places; signifying the East-Town, or the West-Town, &c. But when such Names are affixt, they can be no longer considered as Ap-

pellatives: yet

1. We read Gen. 13.1. That Abram went up out of Egypt into the South. Now, from the Context, we are plainly informed, that Abram went up from Egypt into the Land of Canaan, which lay to the North-East: And the Geographer knows, that had he gone into the South, he must have bent his Course towards Æthiopia. This Inconfistency is occasioned, by not confidering that נגב Negeb, was the proper Name of the Place, to which Abram went, when he returned out of Egypt; the Place where Abram had sojourned, before he went down into Egypt, upon account of the Famine. And, we have this Account of his first Arrival there, when he came from Haran, given, Chap. 12.6. &c. Abram passed through the Land of Canaan unto Mekom Sichem, unto Allon Moreh: And he removed from thence unto a Mountain; and built an Altar unto the Lord; and from thence he went on to Negeb.

Negeb, undoubtedly, as an Appellative, fignifies The South; and therefore, it is so rendered in all the antient Versions, except the Greek; where it is frequently translated The Desert, or, The Wilderness; but, on what Account I cannot discover, unless it was from observing the Impropriety of saying, that Abram went up out of Egypt, into the South.

We are told, Gen. 13.3. That Abram removed again from Negeb to Bethel, or, to the Mountain where where he had formerly built an Altar unto the Lord. And we are informed 20.1. that, after the Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrab, Abraham returned again to Negeb: and 24.62. that Isaac dwelt there, when Rebecca came unto him. And, that this was a plentiful Part of the Country, appears by Moses's sending the Spies thither, "Go "up this way to Negeb." Numb. 13.17. And they went up to Negeb: and, in the Valley of Escol, they sound that cluster of Grapes, which they have between two upon a Pole and brought they bare, between two, upon a Pole, and brought it to Moses. Now, any one who is acquainted with the Route, which Moses, and the Children of Israel, took through the Wilderness, will see the same Impropriety in Moses's saying to the Spies, "Get you up this way Southward," as in its being said, that "Abram went up out of Egypt into the South.

2. Amongst the Encampments that Abram made in the Land of Canaan, it is debated whether that mentioned Gen. 13.18. was, in the Plain of Mamre, or by the Oak of Mamre? Give the proper Name, and call it Allon-Mamre, and the Enquiry is altogether needless. In this place A-bram dwelt, when he heard of Lot's being taken Captive, 14.13. And, in this Place, the Lord appeared unto him, 18.1. And, surely, this Place may be as properly called Allon Mamre, as the Place, where Deborah was buried, was called Allon

Baccuth, Gen. 35.8.

3. The four Kings who plundered Sodom, and took away Lot, are said to be, the King of Shinar, the King of Ellasar, the King of Elam, and the King of Nations, Gen. 14.1. Now, I doubt not, but that Goim was as much the proper Name of Tidal's Territories, as Shinar, Ellafar, and Elam were of the Territories of the other Kings here mentioned: The neighbouring Princes acknowledged him to be King of Goim; but he is obliged to the Translators for honouring him with the Title of King of Nations.

4. Our Version of Deut. 1.7. is "Turn you, "and take your journey, and go unto the Mount of the Amorites, and unto all the Places nigh thereunto, in the Plain, and in the Hills, and in the Vale, and in the South," But I cannot think the Scripture-Language is, any where, so diffuse and indeterminate, as it appears in this View. The Order was given, no doubt, in such a Manner, as that it would be perfectly intelligible to the Children of Israel; and, the Places they were to take their Journey to, particularly mentioned, by their proper Names: Therefore, though it would be no Geographical Description to us; yet, if the proper Names were retained, it would have more the Appearance of conveying some distinct Ideas. And the Passage might be rendered, "Go unto Ar of the Amorites, and to "all the Places nigh thereunto, in Arebah, in Ar, "in Shapelah, and in Negeb."

That Ar was the proper Name of a Place, as well as an Appellative, to fignify a Mount, or a Mountain, is evident from Numb. 21.28. And Deut. 2.9, 18. where mention is made of Ar of the Moabites; which, perhaps, may there be so particularly distinguished, because there were other Places of the same Name, in different Parts of the Territories of the Land of Canaan. And a Reviser of the Version may frequently find Occasion to change the Appellative into a proper Name, as I should be inclined to do, Josh 11.21. Joshua cut off the Anakims from Ar, and from Hebron, from Debir, and from Anab.

That Arebah, in its common Signification, means a Plain, is allowed: But might it not also be a Name given to certain Districts? The mention of The Plain, conveys a very distinct Idea to the Inhabitants of Wiltshire: and we cannot doubt, but that the mention of Arebah did the same to the Israelites who inhabited beyond fordan, from reading the Passage in Deut. 3.16. "Unto the "Reubenites, and unto the Gadites, I have given "from Gilead, even unto the River Arnon; half "Nahal, and Gebul, even unto the River "fabbok, which is the Border of the Children "of Ammon; Arebah also, and Jordan, and "the Coast, from Chinnereth, even unto the Sea "of Arebah, under Ashdoth Pisgah East-" ward."

Nahal, and Gebul are Names, which the English Reader is not acquainted with; because the Translators have rendered them as Appellatives; but, the Hebrew Names will give him as just an Idea of their Extent and Situation, as calling them the Valley and the Border.

Shapelah signifies a Vale; but it might also be a proper Name: And the Kings that Joshua, and the Children of Israel are said to have smitten on the West of Jordan, Josh. 12.8. appear to have reigned in Ar, and in Shapelah, and in Arebah, and in Ashdoth, and in Midbar, and in Negeb: and the Context leads us to judge, that these six were were the proper Names of the several Districts of the Hittites, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites. The Translators may have rendered these Words by proper Appellatives, in calling them the Mountains, and the Vallies, and the Plains, and the Springs, and the Wilderness, and the South-Country: But it is scarcely to be imagined, that these Appellatives convey to the Reader, a much more clear Idea of the Nature, Extent, and Situation of these Countries, than the proper Names would do.— As, from the Mention of The Vale of Belvoir, or The Vale of Evesham, a Foreigner, who understood the common Import of the Word Vale, could form no Judgment of the Extent of the Place; nor would he imagine, that Towns and Hills, with extensive Prospects, were included in the Term of Vale.—To call a Dominion, therefore, by the appellative Words, Mountain, Valley, Plain, &c. may confine the Idea, more than the Hebrew Word, given as a proper Name, would do; and scarcely be more particularly descriptive.

In vain are these Names, or any account of these Districts, sought for in Sanson's Geographia Sacra, or Bonferius's Onomasticon. The whole Synopsis Criticorum, for Want of considering these as proper Names, have lost a fine Opportunity of displaying their Art, upon a very intricate Subject; and not less important than some, upon which they have bestowed great Labour.

5. It may fometimes be difficult to determine, whether a Word is to be considered as an Appellative, or a proper Name: as when we are told, 1 Chro. 13.7. That the Ark being taken out of the House

House of Abinadab, Uzza and אחין drove the Cart. Ahio may be a proper Name, but we meet not with it in any of the Genealogies or Catalogues that are given, upon any other Occasion. As an Appellative, it fignifies his Brother, or his Brethren. What appears to have determined our Translators here, was, the Masoretic Points; but, either the Points did not so determine it, when the antient Versions were made, or, they were not regarded by those who made them; they all render the Word as an appellative Plural, his Brethren, except the Latins, who understood it in the fingular Number.

The Word לחי, as an Appellative, fignifies, a Jaw-Bone; but, it was also the proper Name of the Place, where the Philistines met Samson, and where he flew a Thousand of them with the Jaw Bone of an Ass. The Name also of Ramath-Lehi was given to the Place, where he cast away the Jaw-Bone. To consider the Word then, as Appellative, in the next Verse; and to say that, When Samson was thirsty, God clave an hollow "Place that was in the Jaw, and there came "Water thereout;" must be through Want of common Attention; because, they immediately subjoin, " Wherefore he called the Name thereof "En hakkore, (q. d. The Well of him that called) " which is in Lehi, unto this Day." - Such Mistakes as these, give wrong Ideas to the ignorant; and furnish the Scoffers with matter of Ridicule.— The Error, indeed, is corrected in the Margin, which hath Lehi, instead of the Jaw; see Judg. 15.14, &c. But, few Bibles, in Comparison, have marginal Notes: the Text, and not the Margin, Margin, is ordered to be read in publick; and the Infidels seldom look farther than into the Tranflation, to feek for Objections.

6. Mr. Peters, in his Differtation on the Book of Job, p.340. hath observed, that instead of rendering Psalm 141.7. Our Bones are scattered at the Grave's Mouth; or, lie scattered before the Pit; it should be, Our Bones are scattered by the order of Saul. The Letters was are feathered by the order of Saul. The Letters was are the same both in the Appellative, and the proper Name: And as it hath been made already apparent, that too strict an adherence to the Points may obscure the Sense of a Passage; so, should a new Version be ordered to be undertaken, the Translators would consider themselves as more at Liberty to examine the Propriety of them, than the former Composers of the modern Versions have done.

That beautiful Illustration of Deut.33.1, &c. by Mr. Kennicott, p.422. hath not escaped the particular Notice of any of his Readers: And, it must strike the Attention of those who have not seen it, to be told, that it is not said, The Lord came with ten Thousands of Saints, (which is a Circumstance no where mentioned in Scripture,) but, that he came from Meribah-Kadesh: Moses referring the Children of Israel back to the remarkable Event recorded, Exod.17.1, &c.

This Article might be enlarged with many more Instances of the like kind; and it might, probably, be justly observed also, that what were intended as Appellatives, are sometimes rendered as proper Names: and of this Job 1.15. may be an Instance; "The Sabeans fell upon the Asses," and took them away: "as the Sabeans are no where else mentioned; and, as we have no Authority for considering waw here as a proper Name, but that of the Latin Version; the Greek and Syriac calling it a Band of Robbers .- But from these Remarks, on this Head, a Reader will see cause to be attentive in considering whether a Word be an Appellative, or a proper Name; and a Translator will be immediately aware of the Impropriety of faying "The City that is in the "midst of the River." "And the Mount in the " Valley." See Josh. 13.9, 16, 19.

SECTION XXVII.

CEVERAL Words, in all Languages, are rendered the more difficult to be understood, by their being equivocal: and, where a Word hath two, or more general Significations, a Translator may frequently be led to take it in a different Sense from that, in which the Writer meant it. Upon such Words the Commentators have great Room to expatiate: And, notwithstanding they have bestowed great Pains upon them, yet, from the improper Translation of these equivocal Words, arise more, and more material, Errors in the Verfions, than from any other Cause whatsoever.

1. The Word may, I think, properly be reckoned at the Head of these equivocal Words; as it is made Use of to express, (1.) The Wind; Gen. 8.1. God (made, or) caused a Wind to pass over the Earth, and the Waters abated. Exod. 10. 13,19, &c. An East Wind, a West Wind .- (2.) Breath; Gen. 6.17. All Flesh, wherein is the Breath of Life, shalldie .- 7. 22. All in whose No-strils was the Breath of Life died, &c. - (3.) What affists Breathing; A gentle Air, therefore, Gen. 3.8. called, A Breeze, or, the cool of the Day; and, for the same Reason, properly translated Comfort or Refreshment, Esther 4.14.—

(4.) As the Wind bloweth every Way, so Fer. 52.23. it fignifies a Side: and Gen. 32.16. it is rendered a Space, or a Distance. — (5.) A Spirit; in the Sense we speak of the Spirit of God. Gen. 41.38. A Man in whom the Spirit of God is. Exod. 28.3. Whom I have filled with the Spirit of Wisdom. — (6.) The Spirit, or Mind of a Man; Gen. 45. 27. The Spirit of Jacob their Father revived. - 26.35. Which were a Grief of Mind unto Isaac, and to Rebecca. — (7.) Courage, or Valour; Yosh. 9.2. Neither did there remain any more Couragé in any Man .- (8.) Anger or Resentment; Judg. 8.3. Then their Anger was abated towards him. — (9.) A Spirit; in the Sense we understand it, when we speak of an Apparition. Job 4.15. A Spirit passed before my Face, and the Hair of my Flesh stood up.

The Word by which Spirit is expressed is equivocal, in most Languages: But we have Words, whereby the feveral distinct Ideas it conveys, in the Scripture-Writings, may be given to the Reader, in such a Manner, as to avoid all Obscurity: yet, as the Translators might be liable to mistake the true Import of the Word, in some Passages; fo, I apprehend, they have done this in the very first Passage where it is used; and so, as to make an Enquiry into the true Sense of the Word a Matter of Importance. Gen. 1.2. " The Spirit of "God moved upon the Face of the Waters."—

I cannot but think it derogatory to the Spirit of God, to introduce it as moving upon the Waters to no apparent Purpose; and to be a Transgression of that proper Rule of the Poet,

Nec Deus intersit, niss dignus vindice nodus.

A Rule, which is never transgressed in all the Mosaic Writings; and, in my Opinion, Moses had no such Thing as the Spirit of God here in View. In this Verse, he appears to be only giving an Account of the original and confused State of the Earth; and to do it in a Manner most strongly descriptive, "The Earth was chaotic and uninger formed; and Darkness was upon the Face of the Abyss; and a most violent Wind blew upon the Surface of the Waters." From this Account, no doubt but Ovid composed those admired Lines, Nullus adhuc mundo præbebat lumina Titan. Quáque erat & tellus, illic & pontus & aër. Sic erat instabilis tellus, innabilis unda.

In the next Verse, God is introduced, saying, Let there be Light; and there was Light; and afterwards, giving a Command to the Waters, to depart to their appointed Places; and that, in Language more sublime than Ovid was capable of equaling, though he had this Original before him, as no one will doubt who reads him; But I shall only here observe, that the Lines above quoted are such a Paraphrase of this Verse, as may induce us to think, that Moses meant only to express a most violent Wind by the Words property, if those Words will bear that Construction; and,

L That

That אלהים was frequently added to Words, in order to express them in the most superlative Degree, is well known to every one conversant in the original Scriptures. The highest Compliment that the Children of Heth could pay, was expressed by this Word, in that very polite Conversation which is upon Record in the 23d Chapter of Genesis, "Hear us, my Lord, thou art a mighty "Prince amongst us."—The mighty Thunderings mentioned Exod. 9.28. are in Hebrew called, The Voices of God. — The Panic, the Philistines are said to have been seized with, 1 Sam. 14.15. is called, The Trembling of God .- The Favour, which David was inclined to shew to the House of Saul, is literally rendered 2 Sam. 9.3. The Kindness of God. - And, after considering these Expressions, will it not readily be allowed, that בות אלהים The Wind of God, may properly fignify, a most violent Wind?

We may observe here, that both אל and יהוה are added to Words, to express an high Superlative, as well as אלהים. Gen. 13. 10. A beautiful Garden, is called the Garden of the Lord.—1 Sam. 26. 12. A very deep Sleep, is called The Sleep of the Lord.—2 Chron. 14. 14. and 17. 10. A very great Fear, is called The Fear of the Lord.—And Psal. 80. 10. The tallest Cedars, are called The Cedars of God.

2. The Verb Non is so equivocal, as to mean, in direct Opposition, both To sin, and To purge, or purify from Sin. In the former Sense it is most commonly used; as in Psal. 51. 4. "Against thee "only have I sinned:" But we must understand it in the direct contrary Sense in the 7th Verse of the the same Psalm; "Thou canst purge me with Hyssop, that I may be clean." So again, Lev. 14. 52. "He shall purify the House with the Blood "of the Bird." And Numb. 8.21. The Levites were purified, and they washed their Clothes.

The Noun derived from this Verb signifies also both Sin, and a Propitiation for Sin; and likewise the Effects of Sin. It hath not escaped the Notice of the Commentators, that not, which is improperly rendered Sin, Gen. 4.7. means, an Offering for Sin: where God faith unto Cain, "Why art thou wroth? and why is thy Counte-"nance fallen? If thou hadft done well, would "there not have been an Elevation (of thy Coun-"tenance, or an Acceptance of thy Sacrifice?) " And, if thou hast not done well, a Sin-Offering "lieth at the Door; it is at thy Disposal, and "thou hast Power over it." Hence, the Nature of Cain's Crime; the Justice of his Punishment; and the Mercy of God, evidently appear. Cain had not facrificed in a proper Manner, as Abel had done; God informs him, that he might yet make an Attonement, by a Sin-Offering, which was ready at hand: Instead of doing which, he rose up against his Brother, and slew him; and so rendered his Crimes unpardonable. — Deut. 9.21. I took your Sin, (i.e. the Effect of your Sin, the Calf which ye had made to worship,) and burnt it.—

Hos. 4.8. "The Priests eat up the Sin of my "People;" i.e. The Sin-Offerings, which, by the Law, were appointed to be confumed by Fire. — Psal. 40.6. The Word is rightly rendered, in all the antient and modern Versions; "Burnt-" Offering L 2 -

" Offering and Sacrifice for Sin hast thou not re" quired;" i. e. not only those. See § xx11.2.

As the Hebrew Word was used thus equivocally, fo the Apostle St. Paul uses the Greek Word apagria in the same Manner. 2 Cor. 5.21. "For he hath made him to be Sin for us, who "knew no Sin; that we might be made the "Righteousness of God in him;" i.e. "God hath made Christ to be an Offering and a Propitiation of Sin for us, though he knew no Sin; that we might be made the Objects of Justification, according to the Method which God appointed, by our Faith in Christ." See § xx1v.13.—Rom. 6.10. " For in that he died, he died unto Sin once:" which is thus paraphrased by Dr. Doddridge; "For, whereas he died, he died once for all, as a Sacrifice for Sin, to attone the injured Justice of "God, and repair the Honours of his violated "Law."-Rom. 8.3. "For what the Law could " not do, in that it was weak through the Flesh, "God, sending his own Son, in the Likeness of " finful Flesh, and for Sin, condemned Sin in the "Flesh." The Ellipsis to be supplied is, That, what the Law could not do, God, fending his Son to be a Sacrifice for Sin, hath done for us. ----There is an Ellipsis of the same Kind, Heb. 10.6. which is supplied in our Version; "In Burnt-"Offerings and Sacrifices for Sin, thou hast had " no Pleafure."

3. The Word yy which is somewhat fynonymous to moun, and is commonly translated Iniquity, sometimes signifies, The Effects, or Punishment of Iniquity. Exod. 28.43. The sanctified Vestments shall be upon Aaron and his Sons, when they they come near to the Altar, to minister in the holy Place, that they bear not their Iniquity, and die. — Numb. 18.23. The Levites shall do the Service of the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and they shall bear their Iniquity.— 1 Sam. 25.24. Upon me, O Lord, be this Iniquity.— 28.10. And Saul sware by the Lord (to the Witch of Endor,) saying, As the Lord liveth, there shall no Punishment happen to thee for this Thing. — Lam. 5.7. Our Fathers have sinned, and are not; and we have borne their Iniquities. — Ezek. 18.19. Doth not the Son bear the Iniquity of the Father? — See Lev. 5.1, 17, &c.

4. The common Signification of bless; but it is sometimes used in the opposite Sense, and means, To curse, or to blaspheme. Job, 1.5. It may be my Sons have sinned, and cursed God in their Hearts. — ½.11. He will curse thee to thy Face.—2.9. Curse God, and die.—1Kin. 21.10. Thou didst blaspheme God, and the King.— ½.13. Naboth did blaspheme God, and the King. How unaccountably is this Charge laid against Naboth in the 70 Version, and the Vulgar Latin, ευλοδησε Θεον και Βασιλεα, Benedixit Deum & Regem? For though the Hebrew Word admits of opposite Significations; neither the Greek or Latin Words are so conversive: And no English Reader will think, there could be any great Propriety in the Children of Belial witnessing against Naboth, and saying, Naboth Blessed God, and the King.

5. The Word tignified, either To kiss, or, to be subject to. It is generally rendered by φιλεω and καλαφιλεω in the 70: But they saw the Necessity of rendering it, Gen. 41. 40. And to thy Word shall all my People be subject: And they have rendered, 1 Kin. 19. 18. Every Mouth that hath not worshipped Baal; instead of kissed him, as it is in our, and the other Versions. — Psal. 2. 12. "Kis the Son, lest he be angry, and ye pe-"rish," must imply a Direction to Submission and Obedience; and consequently, the Word should be here rendered, Obey, or be subject to; as Kiss cannot so properly be used, to express this metaphorically, in our Language: Most of the antient Versions have it Receive Instruction; and, the Commentators have supposed, that there was a various Reading in the former Hebrew MSS. but I see no sufficient Reason to support such a Conjecture.

6. אות fignifies either a Mark, a Sign, or a Token: Words which feem to be much of the same Import; yet, the putting one of these for the other, hath given great Room to the Critics to expatiate upon that Passage Gen. 4.15. "And " the Lord set a Mark upon Cain." The Labour bestowed to shew what Kind of Mark this was, hath been immense, and, hitherto, in vain; as no one is yet allowed to have given any satisfactory Account of that Matter: Which, indeed, I think very excusable; because the Enquiry was made upon a Point where the matter of Fact was wanting. God had fet no Mark upon Cain: He had given him a Token, that no one that met him should kill him; and such an one, as entirely allayed his Apprehensions upon that Head. Therefore, the only Difficulty remaining is, to know robat the Sign or Token was, that God gave to Cain, Here is as much Room for the Critics to exercise exercise their Skill in, as there was in the other Enquiry: But, there is no necessity of our being informed in the Particulars of this Circumstance. We do not find, that either of the two Wives of Lamech had the Curiosity to ask him, by what Sign or Token he was affured, that "as the Slaugh-"ter of Cain was to be avenged seven Times, so he had a Promise that the Slaughter of himself " should be avenged seventy and seven-fold," if. any one should kill him: yet there can be little doubt but that, in his Speech, recorded Gen. 4. 23. he refer'd to some Sign or Token, which he had received from the Lord. That God was frequently pleased not only to give, but to confirm his gracious Promifes by remarkable Signs and Tokens, can have escaped no one's Notice: that the asking for such a Confirmation of a Promise, was not unreasonable, or displeasing to the Lord, is evident from Exod.4.1, &c. Judg. 6.17. Ifa.7.11. and many other Places; from remarking which it is apparent, that the Word my generally fignifies a Sign or a Token; and I have not observed, that it is any where necessary to suppose it to fignify a Mark, in that Sense the Critics would understand it here.

7. The common Signification of Typ is Work; but, it is used also to express the Wages or Reward that is given for Work: And Job, 7.2. it is rightly rendered, The Reward of his Work. — Lev. 19. 13. The Wages of him that is hired. — Pfal. 109. 20. Let this be the Reward of mine Adversary. — Isa. 40. 10. The Lord's Reward is with him, and his Work is before him. The Margin here rightly puts his Recompense, instead of his Work. — 49 4.

My Work is with my God. — Jer. 22.13. And giveth him not for his Work, though there is no

Particle to express for.

8. בשרה is always rendered by the 70 בשרה is always rendered by the אונג בשרה. or ευαγΓελιον: But, it is evident, that it not only means good, or glad Tidings; but also, the Reward that was expected by, or given to those, who brought such Tidings; as it is properly translated 2 Sam. 4.10. Who thought, I would have given him a Reward for his Tidings. Now, though in these, and many fuch like Instances, our Translators have properly rendered the Words; yet it may be obferved, that the antient Versions have greatly obscured many of the Passages, where the Hebrew Words are used in such distinct Senses.

9. The Words ngima, and ngiois are generally rendered Judgment: But as these Words are used in all the equivocal Senses, to which the Word Judgment can be applied; it is no Wonder, that the true Import of the Word is, in some Passages, liable to be mistaken. (1.) It means Judgment in general: Mat.7.2. With what Judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged. — John, 7.24. Judge not according to the Appearance, but judge righteous Judgment.—5.30. My Judgment is just.—8.16. My Judgment is true. (2.) Righteous, or favourable Judgment, or Justice. Mat, 23:23. Ye have omitted the weightier Matters of the Law, Judgment, Mercy, and Faith. — Luke, 12.2. Ye pass over Judgment, and the Love of God. (3.) Condemnation. Mat. 5. 22. Whosoever is angry with his Brother without a Cause, shall be in Danger of the Judgment. — John, 12.31. Now is the Judgment of this World. — Rom. 2.3. Thinkest thou, thou, that thou shalt escape the Judgment of God? — 1 Cor. 11.29. Eateth and drinketh Damnation to himself. — 1.34. That ye come not together unto Condemnation. (4.) The Day of Judgment. Heb. 9.27. It is appointed to all Men once to die; but after this the Judgment. — 2 Pet. 2.4. Delivered them into Chains of Darkness, to be reserved unto Judgment. — Mat. 12. 41. The Men of Niniveh shall rise in Judgment with this Generation. From this view, the Reader will see, that it will be proper for him to be cautious, before he determines what Kind of Doctrine is conveyed by the word Judgment. Without this, he may be liable to mistake the original Purport of Mat. 12. 18. "I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall shew Judgment to the Gentiles." Or, James, 2.13. He shall have Judgment without Mercy, that hath shewed no Mercy; and Mercy rejoiceth against Judgment.

Number of Instances, of Words being used so e-quivocally, as to require the Reader, sometimes, to stop to examine them; and, to shew, that the Want of attending to the particular Sense of such Words in divers Passages, may introduce Improprieties into a Translation. And, though this may appear to be somewhat contradictory to what is said above § xxv. "That the Hebrew Words are "used with as great Propriety and Precision, as "those of any other Language;" yet, surely, that Assertion may be well maintained, allowing, that severy Word is not always used with the strictest Appropriation.

SECTION XXVIII.

IN the Formation of quiescent or defective Verbs, it frequently happens, that the same Word may spring from different Radixes: And, it is very possible, that a Reader, or a Translator, may think the Word is deduced from a Root, with a Signification different from that, which the Writer had in View; and, by that means, alter or obscure the Passage.

ו. The Word ויראו Gen. 50.15. may be deduced either from ראה To fee; or, from ירא To be afraid. The Translators of this Passage have generally taken it, here, to be a Derivative of האה, and rendered it, according to the English Version, "When Joseph's Brethren saw that their Father was dead." But, as it may as regularly be formed from אר. we ought to consider, what Turn it would give to the Expression; and which is most agreeable to the Context: From the latter, the Translation must be "Joseph's Brethren were a-"fraid, when their Father was dead, or because "their Father was dead:" for it is well known, that 's as properly fignifies Because, as When: And now, it is left to the Reader's Judgment to determine, in what Manner he thinks it the more probable that the Historian intended to give the Account of this Matter. In any View, indeed, the Fear of Joseph's Brethren is implied, lest he should resent their former Usage of him, after their Father was dead; and therefore, I think it the more probable, that it was intended to be expressed.

2. In the same Manner, the true Radix of the Word seems to have been mistaken 1 Kin. 19.3.

"And,

"And, when he faw that, he arose and went to "Beer-sheba," מו מולך are the Words in the Original; and no Relative is added to any of them: And are not these Words properly rendered in the antient Versions, telling us, that when Elijab knew, how Jezebel had threatned his Life, "He was afraid, and arose, and went away?"
The Points may now direct us to consider the Word as derived from The sand in Complaisance thereto, and Neglect of the antient Versions, the modern Translators, (except the French,) have given an improper Turn to the Expression.

3. In the Bishops Bible we read, Pfal. 64.9.

"And all Men that fee it, shall declare the Work

"And all Men that fee it, shall declare the Work
"of God;" though the Word there is "" without any Relative, and properly rendered, in our later Version, "All Men shall fear."

4. " not only signifies to fear; but also to worship, or reverence. See 2 Kin.17.28,32,33,35, Ec. And therefore, I think, that Gen.46.29.
might be more properly translated, "Joseph went "up to meet Israel his Father, and did Reverence unto him;" than "presented himself unto him."
And, very frequently, when we read of fearing God or fearing Man, the Reader will find it necessary to affix the Idea of Worship, or Reverence cessary to affix the Idea of Worship, or Reverence, to that Word.

5. Some of the Commentators are inclined to read 1 Kin. 12. 2. Jeroboam returned out of Egypt, instead of dwelt in Egypt. (See Poole's Synopsis, in loc.) And, the Context lays a good Foundation for their Opinion. The Word may either be derived from w, or we. And, as feroboam's going into Egypt had been mentioned in the preceding ceding Chapter, his Return appears here to be

The critical Reader will observe many of these quiescent or defective Verbs, in their several Formations, which may be deduced from different Roots; and will think himself at Liberty to consider them in such a Light as the Context shall, most properly, require; or as the most approved Versions and Comments shall direct him to.

SECTION XXIX.

SEVERAL Hebrew Words that are composed of the same Letters, are in different Passages, different Parts of Speech, with very different Significations: and, sometimes, the same Letters which compose both a Noun and a Verb, or a Verb and a Pronoun, may admit of a rational Interpretation considered in either View: But, if they be considered in different Views, by different Interpreters, one of them must render them in a Sense contrary to what the Writer intended, and not convey his Sentiment to the Reader.

1. The Word new Gen. 4.7. hath been so considered; some have rendered it as a Verb, others as a Noun. Taking it as a Verb, our Translators have rendered it, "Shalt thou not be accepteded?" And others, as a Noun, have rendered it Elevation, or, Acceptance. I must confess, that the Word here appears to me to signify Elevation; as particularly referring to what God had before said to Cain, "Why is thy Countenance fallen?" If thou hadst done well, would there not have been an Elevation of thy Countenance from the signal Marks of Approbation which I should "have

"have given unto thee, as I have done to thy Brother Abel?" This Passage is before taken

Notice of. § XXVII. 2.

2. Our later Version of this Word in Psal. 62.

4. is, "They only consult to cast him down from his Excellency." In the former it was, "Their "Device is only to put him down, whom God "will exalt." The original Word is evidently a Noun; yet, Dignity, as we read it in the Bishops Bible, much better expresses the Sentiment, than Excellency: And no Improvement of Style, or Diction, that can be introduced into a Translation, ought to be neglected in a Version of the Bible.

3. The same Letters γ either form the Imperative, from γ , and signify, Go thou: or, they are the Pronoun γ thee, or thou, with the Præsix γ . This Word we find thus translated, Gen. 27. 43, "Arise, flee thou to Laban." But, the Word may here be a Verb; "Arise, flee, go unto La"ban:" The Words are קום ברח לך אל לבן;
an Expression much similar to that, I Sam. 9.3. קום לך בקש; where all the Versions have rendered the Words "Arise, go, seek." And Deut. 10.11. קם לך הרש from the Samaritan Text, and the Targum, is rendered Surge, & Vade.

It is not, indeed, very material, in which Sense the Word is taken in these, and such like Pasfages; But if it be here considered as a Pronoun, it must be allowed to be pleonastick; and there is no Occasion to seek for a Figure of Speech, where the Words may be literally understood.

But, the Points added to this Word, in these Passages, require it to be considered as a Pronoun: It is true, they do so; and shew us, that those who added the Points, confidered it in that View. The Authority of antient Versions weighs much more with me, than the Authority of the Points: And I may appeal to any one, well conversant in the Hebrew Idiom, whether reading in an unpointed Bible, in the Passages before mentioned, he should not, without Hesitation consider it as a Verb?

SECTION XXX.

THOUGH the English Translation of the Bible must be allowed, in general, to be more literal and exact than any other; yet, as the Hebrew would not always admit of a literal Version, the Translators found themselves sometimes under a Necessity of adding Words, to introduce a proper Connexion between, or an Illustration of some Passages. And, in such Cases, they might not always this upon the Addition that was most proper and necessary to be made: Or, they might sometimes think an Addition necessary, where it was not really so.

Our Version of Gen. 15.1. is, "Fear not Abram; "I am thy Shield, and thy exceeding great Re"ward." Now, in the Original, there is no such connective Particle, as makes it necessary to give this Turn to the Expression; and therefore, what was thought wanting was supplied. But, without supplying it, the Words may be literally and properly rendered; "Fear not Abram, I am thy "Shield: thy Reward shall be exceeding great."

Not, that God was his Reward; but, that God would give him a great Reward. And that Abram understood the Words in this Sense, is evident from from his Reply to them; which was, "Lord, "what wilt (or, why shouldest) thou give me, " feeing I am childless?" And God there gave him the Promise of a Son.

2. Our Version of Gen. 30. 27. is, "And La-" ban said unto Jacob, If now I have found Fa-" vour in thy Sight, Tarry: For I have learned " by Experience, that the Lord hath blessed me for thy sake." The literal Translation is, " If " now I have found favour in thy Sight, let me "discover (or, experience) it; for the Lord hath blessed me for thy sake." From whence it appears, that the first For is misplaced in our Verfion; and Tarry is added, to supply a supposed Ellipsis, and both, without any real Occasion. The Desire of Jacob's Tarrying, is undoubtedly implied in the Words of Laban; but is not more necessary to be expressed in the Translation, than it was in the Original.

Another Observation, of a different Kind, occurs upon this Text; which is, that בגללך properly rendered for thy sake, may, by mistake, have been substituted into the Text instead of fince thy Coming. The 70 evidently translated from this latter Word; And, in Jacob's Reply y. 30. he tells Laban, "It was but little that thou " hadst before I came, and the Lord hath blessed "thee לרגלי fince my coming".

3. I cannot but think, that the Order for the Treatment of those, who might be suspected to have been attacked with the Leprofy, as it is represented in our Version of Lev. 13. is very greatly mistaken. We are there told, that if any Man had a Swelling, or a Scab, or a Pimple in his Flesh, he was to shew it unto the Priest: And though there were no apparent Signs of a Leprofy, the Priest was to shut up him that had the Plague feven Days; y. 4. And if he could not pronounce the Person clean at seven Days End, he was to shut him up seven Days more; y. 5. - According to this Account, every Person, upon the least imaginable Suspicion, must undergo a Confinement of a Week, or a Fortnight's Continuance: Whereas he who really had the Leprofy upon him, was not to be under any Confinement at all. See y. 11.—But every Thing that here appears improbable, or unaccountable, arises from the Errors in our Version; where we have no less than three Mistakes in the Compass of those few Words, "Shut up him that hath the Plague." (1.) Shut up, is put instead of, bind up. (2.) Plague, instead of, Sore: And (3.) Him that hath, is unnecessarily added: And, in short, give only the literal Version of the Original, and neither any Difficulties, nor any Improbabilities, remain. "The " Priest shall bind up the Sore seven Days." And in the following Verses, the mistaking the Purport of the Relative , hath occasioned the same Errors to be carried on through the whole Chapter: See v. 5, &c. " The Priest shall shut him, instead of " bind it up seven Days more."—There is no Room in the Original for the Freethinker to exercise his Wit upon this Chapter; though he may make a great Deal of Diversion with it in our Translation; which is the only one, that most of those, who denominate themselves by that Title, are acquainted with. And, therefore, in Compassion to the Weakness of many, it is our Duty to wish and endeavour, that our Version may be as nearly without Errors, and as little liable to Objections, as the Original: which, in this Chapter, it might be, with some very few and necessary Alterations.

4. Whether ounny was in the original Copies of Heb. 9. 1. or, whether $\varpi_{\varrho}\omega_{\eta}$ refers to the Covenant mentioned in the preceding Verse, is debated amongst the Commentators: I should indeed imagine, that whether it was mentioned or not, the Tabernacle was refer'd to, and not the Covenant; because the Covenant could not so properly be said to have in it the Candlestick, and the Table, and the Shew-Bread, as the Tabernacle. But, I need not enlarge upon this Article, in pointing out the Passages where our Translators may have added improper Words of Connection, or Illustration; since their Additions are all printed in the Italic Character; so that a Reader may readily take under Examination what is in fuch Characters, and pass his own Judgment upon what may be properly called, The Translators Comment upon the Text.

SECTION XXXI.

Hough several Words of a general, and wellknown Signification are fometimes used in appropriated, and sometimes in equivocal Senses; of which many Instances are given § XXIV. and XXVII. Yet, a Translator ought, first, to consider the general Signification of the Word before him; and not recede from that, unless the Context absolutely demands it. Some Observations, to establish this Rule, have been already made § XXV. ThereTherefore I shall here mention but a few particular Instances, where the Want of attending to it hath introduced Improprieties into the Versions.

ו. The general Signification of the Word is Wind, Breath, or Spirit: Though it is used in feveral equivocal Senses, which have been remarked in § XXVII. 1. But, where there was not the least Occasion of considering it in any particular appropriated Sense, the 70 have rendered it by αιμα, Job, 6.4. ανηρ, Prov. 17. 22. and 18. 14. — βοηθεια, Ifa. 31. 3. Θυμος, Job, 15. 13. πλειθρον, Job, 26. 13. — χοίος, Ifa. 32. 2. — οδυνη, Job, 30.22. — πά/ηρ, Num. 16. 22. — 50μα, Pf. 32.2. — φρονησις, Josh. 5.1. — And φως, Jer. 51.16.—In all which Passages the Sense is obscured, or the Sentiment alter'd, by the unwarrantable Liberties the Translators have here taken. I do not particularly point out the Improprieties occasioned by the Use of such Words, so foreign to the true Import of the Original; because our Translators have not, in these Instances, been misled by this Version: And the English Reader, by referring to the Passages, will find the Word properly rendered, Wind, Breath, or Spirit. But this may give a Caution to those, who may have too great a Regard for the 70 Version, and consult it in order to understand the Meaning of any particular Expression, instead of applying to the Original. It is a Version of very great Value; and will frequently give us much Affistance, in our Enquiries into the true Sense of Passages: But the Compilers of it either did not rightly understand, or paid too little Regard to, the general and appropriated Senses of several Hebrew Words: For,

2. I think, there is no Word in Hebrew but \Box_{1} , nor any in Greek but $\alpha_{1}\mu\alpha_{1}$, by which Blood can be expressed: Yet we have seen above, that they have given $\alpha_{1}\mu\alpha_{1}$ as the Translation of \Box_{1} : And we may farther observe, that in Isa. 63.3, and 6. they have given it as the Translation of \Box_{2} , which signifies Strength, or Power. In the former of these Verses, they have been followed by our Translators, "Their Blood shall be sprinkled on my Garments." \Box_{1} signifies the fuice of the Grapes, troden out in the Wine-Press: Which may, indeed, metaphorically be called the Blood of the Grape, as it is Gen. 49.11. Deut. 32.14. And, in the latter Verse, our Franslators have rendered \Box_{2} Strength; "I will bring "down their Strength to the Earth."

In the Alexandrian Copy of the 70 we have αιμα Zech. 9.15. where the Hebrew is 127; which in the Vatican is rendered by αυθες. It is probable, that there might be a Variation in the different Hebrew Copies these Versions were made from; or, that one of the Translators might mistake the Word. — The Translation of 17, 2 Sam. 21.2. in the Vatican Copy is ελλειμα, in the Alexandrian λιμα, or λειμα; for which Dr. Grabe puts αιμα, in the Margin of his Edition; upon what Authority, or, for what Reason, I find not; as λειμα or ελλειμα is a proper Rendering of the Word 17, which, in this Connexion, evidently signifies The Remnant of the Amorites.

3. The Hebrew Word hath a particular Reference to the Privilege, which the nearest Relation amongst the fews had, to redeem his Kinsman, or whatever his Kinsman had sold, or pawned, to another Person. See Lev. 25. 25-48. As no fuch Custom prevailed in any other Nation, there was no Way of expressing the Force, and full Meaning, of this Word, but by a Periphrasis: We may say, that such an one hath the Equity of Redemption of a Thing or Person; and this conveys the Import of the Word : Whereas it is commonly rendered by the general Word Redeem. So that those who are not conversant in the Original, can, but in few Places, fee the Force of the Expression where this Word is used. If this be not attended to, the Energy of a very beautiful Sentence is lost, Pf. 77. 15. "Thou, with thine." Arm, hast redeemed thy People, even the Sons " of Jacob and Joseph;" i.e. "Thou, O Lord, "hast claimed thy Right to the Equity of the Re-"demption of thy People, whom thou hadst sold " into the Hands of their Enemies; thou gavest " Egypt for their Ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for them." Observe the Import of this Word, Exod. 6.6. Pf. 74.2. Ifa. 35.9. -43.1. -44.22. Hof. 13.14. &c. &c. - When the Hebrew Writers intended to speak of Redeeming, in the general Sense of the Word, they expressed themselves by .. See Exod. 13. 15.—34. 20. Lev. 19. 20. &c. &c. And, notwithstanding this Precision, so observable in the Hebrew, נאל is translated into Greek by the several Words αγχισευω, απολύβροω, εκλαμβανω, εξαιρεω, εξαιρω, λύβροω, μιαινω, and ρυομαι. Trommius's Concordantia Græca may be consulted upon these Words, by those who would refer to the Texts, where the true Sense of this Word is obscured by such Versions. And, by consulting his Index Hebraus, it may be seen, that there is fcarcely scarcely any Hebrew Word, of the most general and obvious Signification, but what is sometimes and obvious Signification, but what is sometimes rendered by Greek ones, as foreign to the true Meaning of it, as can well be imagined. Thus, for Instance, as a Servant, is translated αρχων, a Prince; Numb. 22. 18. And α King, Ceλη, Counsel; Eccles. 2. 12. And α Perfection, or Uprightness, κακια Evil, or Perversness; Job, 4.6. And must not such Observations as these, fully convince us, how incapable any of the Versions, we have at present, are, of conveying to us the Sentiments delivered in the Language of Scripture. and shew the Necessity of endeavouring, as ture; and shew the Necessity of endeavouring, as much as we are able, to attain a right Under-standing of the original Language.

SECTION XXXII.

HE inserting of Stops in an improper Manner, must make a Sentence, or a Discourse, less clearly intelligible to the Reader, and may cause a Translator to give a wrong Turn to an Expression.

The Hebrew Writings are, perhaps, less liable to Errors of this Sort, than any others of great Antiquity: For, though Stops, of any Kind, seem to have been but little used in antient Times; yet, as the Sentences are generally short and clear, and most commonly divided by a Vau, or some other Particle; those Particles, in a great Measure, supply the Want of Stops, and generally direct us to read the Periods in a proper Manner. But these have not always been duly attended to by the Translators.

1. The present Obscurity of that Passage, Numb. 16.37,38. seems to arise from this Cause:

Take up the Censers out of the Burning, and scatter thou the Fire yonder; for they are " hallowed. The Censers of these Sinners against "their own Souls." It must require some Ingenuity to fill up the Ellipsis, so as rightly to under-stand what is meant by, "The Censers of these "Sinners against their own Souls:" But if we read the Sentences, as we appear to be directed by the Particles; and render the Words literally; there is no Ellipsis, and no Obscurity: "Take " up the Cenfers out of the Burning, and scatter "thou the Fire yonder: For the Censers of these " Sinners are sanctified by their Intentions; there-" fore make them into broad Plates for a Covering " for the Altar." In this Version, the Sentences are not only divided in a different Manner; but, " Against their own Souls," is altered into, "By their Intentions:" which appears to be the Meaning of תנפשתם, not only from the Conclusion of the 38th Verse, where it is said, "For they offered them before the Lord, therefore " they are sanctified;" but also, because the Word way, frequently fignifies The Mind, Will, Defire, and Intention. See Gen. 23.8. 2 Kin. 9. 15. &c.

2. The Passage Job 4.8. &c. is thus read in our Version;

8. They that plow Iniquity, and fow Wickedness, reap the same.

9. By the Blast of God they perish, and by the Breath of his Nostrils they are consumed.

10. The Roaring of The Lyon, and the Voice of the fierce Lyon, and the Teeth of the young Lyons are broken.

וו. דיש The old Lyon perisheth for Lack of Prey, and לביא the fout Lyons Whelps are scattered abroad,

The

The 9th and 10th y. will admit of a different Division, whereby the Language will appear to be more correct; for, it cannot properly be said, that the Roaring of the Lyon, and the Voice of the fierce Lyon are broken. And it may be read thus, "They that plow Iniquity, and sow Mis"chief, reap it. By the Blast of God they "perish, even by the Breath of his Nostrils. The "Roaring of the Lyon, and the Voice of the "fierce Lyon are stopped; the Teeth of the "young Lyons are broken. The old Lyon pe"risheth for Want of Prey, and the stout Lyons

"Whelps are dispersed."

The whole Passage is here quoted, because it feems to confirm the Observation I have made § XVII. That several Beasts are spoken of, in Scripture, by Words, whose appropriated Meaning we cannot now discover. I can find no sufficient Reasons to induce us to suppose, that five Sorts of Lyons are refer'd to by the five Words above mentioned : אריה no Doubt means a Lyon; and כפיר appears to fignify a young Lyon: But, I am of Opinion, that שחל, and לביא, and לביא, were wild Beasts of different Species. But, supposing the Distinctions here pointed out to be proper ones, yet there is evidently a Fault in our Version, in not preserving the same Distinctions through the whole Scripture. אריה is called a young Lyon, Num. 23. 24. שהה a Lyon, without Distinction, Ps. 91. 13. As is also רפיף Prov. 28. 1. And who Prov. 30. 30. And who is sometimes called a young Lyon, Isa. 30. 6. and sometimes a Lyoness, Ezek. 19. 2. But, to return to the Observations on false Pointing.

3. In M 4

3. In the Pfalms, pointed as they are to be fung or said in Churches, we read 62.9. "The "Children of Men are deceitful upon the "Weights; they are altogether lighter than Va"nity itself:" Whereas it will appear to every judicious Reader, as well as to those who understand the Original, that the Stop ought to have been put after deceitful.

4. The Stop in Dan. 9.25. hath added farther Difficulties to that obscure Piece of Chronology. Our Version places it according to the present Masorete Hebrew. "From the going forth of the "Commandment to restore, and to build Jeru-" falem, shall be seven Weeks: And threescore " and two Weeks the Street shall be built again." But, from all the antient Versions, we may conclude, that this was differently pointed, if it was pointed at all: However, the Words were understood to fignify, "From the going forth of "the Commandment to restore, and to build "Ferusalem, shall be seven Weeks, and threescore and two Weeks: The Street shall be built "again, and the Wall, even in troublesome "Times." Perhaps the seven Weeks are thus distinguished from the sixty-two, to point out the troublesome Times, which the fews had from the Opposition of their Enemies, thro' the Reigns of Abasuerus and Artaxerxes, and till they obtained the Decree of Darius in their Favour. See Ezra, 4.6,7.

5. We read John, 7. 21, 22. in exact Conformity to the present Greek Copies,

21. I have done one Work, and ye all marvel.

22. Mojes therefore gave you the Law.

W hat

What can therefore, in this View, refer to? $\delta_{l\alpha}$ $\tau s \mid_0$ may properly refer to the Work before spoken of, "I have done one Work, and ye all marvel at it. Moses gave you the Law, &c." And, that the Stop would have been more properly put after $\delta_{l\alpha}$ $\tau s \mid_0$, than before it, is what, I think, most Critics will be ready to allow.

most Critics will be ready to allow.

Dr. Doddridge does, not without Cause, intimate that the Stop is, again, put before δια τερο, instead of after it, John, 19.11. And, upon the Removal of it, the Words must be rendered, "Thou couldst have no Power at all against me, except it were given thee from above for this Purpole."

"it were given thee from above for this Purpose."

6. There might be an Intention of writing fome Sentences in the Interrogatory Way, which are not so marked in the present Versions. Of this Sort Heb. 12.5. is supposed to be one; Have ye forgotten the Exhortation, which speaketh unto you as unto Children? And upon Jam. 4.5. Mr. Fox, in his New Testament with References, hath this Note; "This Verse will be more clear, "if we read, as some do, both Parts of this "Verse by Way of Question;" "Do ye think "that the Spirit speaketh in vain, when it so foten represents such Friendship of the World as Enmity with God? Or, does the Spirit which dwelleth in us, if we be truly Friends of God, lust, or stir us up to envy the worldly "Dominion and Pleasure of others?"

I have all along endeavoured to avoid being tedious in multiplying Instances, under the several Heads of these Remarks, any farther than would be proper to shew, that they were justly sounded: The Design of these Papers, not being to point out all the Errors, either in the printed Greek and Hebrew Text, or in any of the Translations of Scripture; but only, to lay before the Reader, at one View, the Nature of the several Errors committed, and the Causes of them; so that any Person, in carefully reading, or translating any Part of Scripture, may be the more readily enabled to discover and remove the Errors and Difficulties he may meet with. And, if any one should be desirous to examine more Passages, where the Stops are supposed to have been improperly made, he may consult Dr. Doddridge's Family Expositor, upon Acts, 3.16. 2 Cor. 9.10. Gal. 3.1. and, Matt. 2.6. &c.

7. As to the improper Division of Chapters and Verses, in several Parts of the Bible, though they have been justly censured by many, and are very obvious; yet where the Sense of the Passage, and the Meaning of the Author, are not thereby obscured, any Remarks upon them would be somewhat foreign to the Subject in Hand; which is only to point out the Difficulties and Obscurities that arise, either from some Corruption, or Misunderstanding of the original Language; neither of which, an improper Division of the Chapters and Verses, (if the Words be literally translated, or rendered according to the Sense of the Author,) can well be faid to introduce. The Passage is as clear, Acts, 21.40. as if the Chapter had not ended with, Hebrew Tongue, faying. And, had there been a proper Occasion to have taken these into Consideration, I should not have proposed that any Alterations should be made therein; because the present Division is necessary to be continued, upon Account of the References and Quotations made, according thereto, by all modern Writers.

SECTION XXXIII.

Language, be well known, and attended to, a Reader cannot discover the Force and Beauty of several Expressions. When Words are so connected as to form a Phrase, they very frequently have appropriated Meanings, very different from what they have when used in their common Acceptation: And many such Appropriations were first given to the Phrases from Customs, or Allusions to well-known Facts, so antient that we may not now be able, with the strictest Scrutiny, to assign any Reason why they were so appropriated; though others may be very obvious. In such Cases, therefore, we can only, from comparing the Passages where they are so used, judge and determine what Meaning is to be affixed unto them.

1. The first Phrase that occurs in the sacred Writings, appears to be that Expression, Gen. 4. 26. which hath so much perplexed a Number of Commentators. או הוול לקרא בשם יהוו In our Version it is rendered, "Then began Men to "call upon the Name of the Lord." This is indeed a literal Translation of the Words; but the Expression cannot be literally understood, by those who consider, that this is spoken of what happened in the Days of Enos the Son of Seth; who was not born before A. M. 235. Are we to suppose, that neither Adam, nor his Descendants, called upon the Name of the Lord before that Time?

Time? And, do we not read of the Offerings, which Cain and Abel brought unto the Lord? The Revisers of this Version, seemingly aware of this Impropriety, have put into the Margin, "Then began Men to call themselves by the "Name of the Lord:" And this, I apprehend, comes much nearer to the true Sense of the Expression: For, we read Deut. 28. 10. כי שם ; "And all the People of the Earth shall see, that thou art called by the Name of "the Lord." Here, the Meaning is, that the Jews were the People of God, adopted and acknow-ledged by him, and under his Protection. And, though here are not exactly the same Words, in the same Context with the former, yet they are evidently synonymous: For, in Isa. 43.7. we find כל נקרא בשמי; Where, by "Every one that is called by my Name," God is plainly speaking of those, who were his adopted בו בו בו בו בו הוא בו fame Terms; I Kings, 8.43. and 2 Chro. 6.33. In the same Manner is to be understood that Passage in Isa. 4.1. "Seven Women shall take "Hold on one Man, saying, Let us be called by "thy Name, or let thy Name be called upon "us." i.e. "Acknowledge us for thy Wives, or "thy Concubines; that we become not common Pro-

"Prostitutes, nor be under the Necessity of re"maining in that State of Virginity, which is "locked upon as a Reproach and a Curse to the "Women of our Nation." See Ps. 78.63. and
fer. 7.34. — The same Phrase occurs Isa. 65.1.
Fer. 14.9.—15.16. and several other Places: From comparing of which, it will be evident, that it hath always one, and the same, Meaning; and, that the Passage Gen. 4. 26. gives us to understand, that "When Seth had a Son born unto him, his "Posterity was distinguished from that of Cain, "by being adopted of God, considered as his Church, acknowledged by him as his peculiar "People, and bleffed with a larger Share of his "Favours."

2. The Phrase, To lift up the Hand, which is made Use of by all the Scripture-Writers, as signifying, To Swear, may probably allude to a Ceremony used, in taking an Oath, by Abraham and his Posterity: But, to People, among whom this Ceremony is not used, the Words do not so readily convey their true Meaning; and therefore, it would be more proper to render them by the usual Word for taking an Oath, than to translate this Hebrew Phrase literally. Abram certainly meant, that he had sworn unto the Lord, that he would not take any Thing of the Spoil of Sodom to himself; Gen. 14.22. And it is always understood so, by Persons of Learning and Discernment: But, as the Scriptures are equally intended for the Information and Instruction of the ignorant and unlearned, every, the least, Dissiculty of understanding them aright, ought to be removed, as far as possibly we can. Our Translators have rendered dered the Phrase by the Word Sworn; Exod. 6.8. and in several other Places: But, in Deut. 32.40. and some others, they have given it a literal Translation: which appears to be still the more improper; because, when these Words will well admit of a more literal Interpretation, The Listing up of the Hand is sometimes used, to express the natural Act of so doing; as Lev. 9.22.—Sometimes to exert an Act of Power; as Micab, 5.9. and sometimes to address God in Prayer; as Ps. 28.2.

3. To fill the Hand, fignifying, To confecrate into the Priests Office, as it is rightly rendered, Exod. 28.41.—29.9. &c. may also, most probably, allude to some of the Ceremonies appointed to be used in such a Consecration. See Lev. 8. 24, 27. But, to render the Phrase literally, as we find it in feveral of the more antient Versions in all Languages; See Exod. 32. 29. 1 Chro. 29. 5. &c. must convey a wrong Idea, if it conveys any, to the more ignorant Reader.—But, the most extraordinary Neglect in the Translators not attending to the Import of this Phrase, we meet with in Ezek. 43.26. where the Original, if it be duly considered, expressly says, "Seven Days they shall "purify the Altar, and make it thoroughly clean, " and they shall consecrate it." The Greek Version. is, και ωλησεσι χειρας αυθων, Or, τας χειρας αυθης, according to the different Copies of the 70. In the Vulgar Latin, Et implebunt manum ejus. The Version of the Syriac is, Consecrentque manus suas. Of the Arabic, Et lavabunt manus fuas. In the Italian, E consacraranno le loro mani. In the French, Et consacreront leurs mains. In Our present Translation, And they shall consecrate them-selves. And, in no one Version, that I have met with, are the Words properly rendered, except in the Bishops Bible; where, to the great Honour of the Translator, who is thought to have been Thomas Bentham, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, we read, "Thus shall they seven Days purify" the Altar, and cleanse it, and consecrate it." And, as this is evidently the true Import of the Hebrew Phrase, we learn from hence, that as it was, at first, used to signify the Consecration into the Priests Office; so it was, afterwards, made Use of, to express other Kinds of Consecration.

And when we are told, 2 Kin. 10. 15. That Jebu asked Jebonadab to give him his Hand, we are not to suppose, that it was, that he might assist him in getting up into the Chariot; but, that Jebonadab would give him an Assurance, that he would assist him in the Prosecution of his Designs.—When we read, Ezra, 10.19. "That the "Sons of the Priests gave their Hands, that they "would put away their Wives." We cannot but understand it, of a Promise that they made to Ezra: The Allusion is evident; the Usage continued, perhaps in most Countries; and therefore, the Phrase is well intelligible to most People; and consequently, there is no Impropriety in retaining it in a Translation.

5. To pour Water upon the Hands of a Person, fignifies, in Allusion to a fewish Custom, To serve, or, To minister unto: But, I doubt whether the general Idea intended, be conveyed to the ignorant, when this Phrase is thus literally translated, lated, 2 Kin. 3. 11. And, if not; would it not have been better to have rendered it, "Here is "Elisha the Son of Shaphat, who attended upon,

" or, ministered unto Elijah?"

6. I put my Life in my Hands, is a Phrase, the Meaning whereof must be determined by the Context of the several Passages where it is used. And, from thence, we may plainly discover, that it signifies, I exposed myself to very great Danger: But, had this, like the foregoing one, been only once used, the Commentators might have varied more than they do in the Explanation of that Passage, Ps. 119.109. "My Soul is continually "in my Hand, yet do I not forget thy Law."
But, when we read fudg. 12.3. That fephthah put his Life in his Hands, and passed over, against the Children of Ammon: And I Sam. 19.5. That David put his Life in his Hand, and slew the Philistine: And, 28.21. That the Witch of Endor said unto Saul, Behold, I have put my Life in my Hand, and have hearkned unto thy Words: And, Job, 13.14. Wherefore do I take my Flesh in my Teeth, and put my Life in my Hand? There can be but little Difficulty in putting a proper Construction upon the several Passages. But, when these are read separately, and not duly considered, the Meaning of the Phrase will not be so obvious, as if it had been converted into Language better fuited to the English Idiom, and rendered, "I exposed my Life to very great Danger."

It is true, there is a Dignity and Solemnity of Expression in the Phrases of all Languages, which must be lost by such a Conversion of them as is here proposed: And the literal Translation of those in the Hebrew, may give the Reader to understand, that the Scriptures are Writings of no modern Date. But, the chief Design of those Writings was, Edistication, and Instruction; which is, in some Measure, obstructed by any Obscurity that may appear therein. And, as, in some of the Remarks above, we have observed, that the Translators have sometimes converted that the Trainfators have followings converted the Phrases into the English Idiom, and in the Margin only, given the literal Version of the Hebrew; so, had this been done more frequently, the Readers of Taste and Judgment would have had the Opportunity of intuitively observing the Dignity and Majesty of the Hebrew Expressions; which few of the common Readers can discover, and be pleased with.

those

7. To strengthen the Hands, is a Phrase, oftener appropriated to fignify, To encourage, than To affift: Yet, as an English Phrase, it should rather seem to have the latter Meaning. In Order, therefore, to convey the clearest Idea of the true Sense of the Phrase, would it not be better to drop the literal Version? Thus, Judg. 7.11. When God ordered Gideon to go down unto the Host of the Midianites; he said unto him, "Thou shalt hear "what they fay; and afterwards thou shalt be "encouraged, or emboldened, to go down."—
2 Sam. 2.7. "Now therefore be ye encouraged,
"and be ye valiant." The two Parts of this Exhortation, which are nearly fynonymous, are expressed by two Hebrew Phrases; and the literal Version of the Original is "Now therefore, let "your Hands be strengthened, and be ye as Sons "of Valour." The Translators have here given a literal Version of the former Phrase, but not of the latter, which is only noted in the Margin. - See 1Sam. 23. 16. Neb. 2. 18. Jer. 23. 14. Ezek. 13. 22.

To weaken the Hands, A Phrase of the like Form with the foregoing, fignifies to discourage. Ezra, 4.4. "Then the People of the Land dis-" couraged the People of Judah." - Fer. 38.4. "Let this Man be put to Death, because he dis-"courageth the Men of War." They were the Words of the Prophet only, that are here faid to weaken the Hands of the Men of War. Not but that to frengthen the Hands, sometimes implies Assistance along with Encouragement; see Judg. 9. 24. Ezra, 6.22. And, to weaken the Hands, may imply also actual Opposition; Neb. 6.9.

8. די חשלח To ftretch, or put forth the Hand, frequently expresses the same natural Act, which. Jeroboam performed, when he put forth his Hand from the Altar, saying, "Lay hold on the Pro-" phet." I Kin. 13.4. But, as a Phrase, it also fignifies to kill, or to flay: For, thus is Gen. 22. 12. to be understood; "Lay not thine Hand upon "the Lad." And 37.22. "Lay no Hand upon "him." And Neb. 13.21. "I will lay Hands " on you."—Esther, 2.21. " Sought to lay Hand "on the King Abasuerus." See 3.6. and 9.2. So the Pfalmist, speaking of the wicked Man, saith, 55.20. "He laid his Hand upon such as be at "Peace with him, and he brake his Covenant." And from hence, after confidering the various Senses, which Commentators have put upon those Words, Exod. 24.11. " And upon the Nobles of " the Children of Ifrael he laid not his Hand;" they appear to fignify, that he flew them not. And, here it is observable, that as, to stretch forth the Hand, is a more literal Interpretation of the Words, Words, than, to lay the Hand; so, had they been so rendered in the Passages above mentioned, their true Import would have been less liable to have been mistaken.

9. To explain, and to shew the Grounds of the Phrase of watering with the Foot, hath employed many learned Pens, in order to fling a true Light upon that Passage, Deut. 11.10. "The Land is not "as the Land of Egypt, where thou sowedst thy " Seed, and wateredst it with thy Foot, as a Gar-"den of Herbs." The Scarcity of Rain in Egypt is well known; and we are informed of the numerous Canals that were cut from the River, to bring Water into the Grounds not only adjacent, but also at a great Distance: But, as this could not be done without much Labour; and, as the Foot appears to be fometimes metaphorically used, to fignify Labour; the Import of the Phrase may be, which thou wateredst with great Labour. And this Conjecture is countenanced by the Words following; "The Land, whither ye go to possess it, " is a Land of Hills and Valleys, which drinketh "Water of the Rain of Heaven."

That the Foot is metaphorically put for Labour, we may see in Isa. 58.13. where, "If thou turn "away thy Foot from the Sabbath," appears most properly to signify, "If thou refrain from all "servile Work upon the Sabbath Day."—Gen.30.30. "The Lord hath blessed thee since my coming," Heb. "on Account of my Feet; q.d. On Account of my Labour, wherewith I have served "thee."—Isa.32.20. "Blessed are ye, that send "forth the Feet of the Ox and of the Ass; i.e. "employ their Labours.

literal Sense, Gen. 40.13, and 20. Because Joseph applied the same Phrase both to the Butler and Baker; though he told them they would be treated in a Manner very different from each other. When we see, Reckon, in the Margin, it, in some Measure, leads us to a right understanding of the Words; the Sense of which, evidently is, "That "Pharaoh would, in three Days time, bring them both to a Trial." On such an Occasion it might be said, with the like Propriety, in an English Phrase, that he would cause them to hold up their Hands: And there is another Phrase of the same Import in Hebrew, which is made Use of 1 Kin. 21.9. Set Naboth on high among the People.

11. To give the Neck, is a Phrase that appears. to have different Significations. The literal Tranflation of Exod. 23. 27. is, "I will give unto thee " the Necks of all thine Enemies." Our Version is, "I will make all thine Enemies turn their Backs " unto thee." To turn the Back, but very imperfectly expresses the Meaning of the Phrase; which feems to include the complete Victory, and Superiority, which God would give his People over their Enemies: So that the Sense of Psal. 18.40. cannot be mistaken; "Thou hast also given me " the Necks of mine Enemies, that I might de-" ftroy them that hate me." But, 2 Chron. 29.6. where the same Words are again improperly rendered, turning the Back, we may see, that giving. the Neck fignifies to be obstinate, or, to continue in Rebellion, or Disobedience: In the same Sense with to harden the Neck; which we meet with 2 Kin. 17. 14. 2 Chron. 30. 8. Prov. 29. 1. Fer. 19. 15. To turn the Neck, is a Phrase of the same Import; Jer. 2.27. "They have turned the Neck" unto me, and not the Face: "which is again repeated, 32.33. But then, To turn the Neck, fometimes fignifies, to Flee, or run away; as Josh. 7.8. "O Lord, what shall I say, when Israel turn—"eth the Neck before her Enemies?" If in these Passages, the Words were literally translated, the Meaning of the Phrase would be better understood, than it can be by the needless Alterations in our Version.

12. The fmiting upon the Thigh, may have frequently been observed as an Expression of great Surprize, or Concern. If therefore, this be one of those, that may not improperly be called natural Customs, in like Manner as, nodding the Head, is an Expression of Consent and Approbation; and griping the Fists, of Anger and Resentment; &c. The Phrase, To smite upon the Thigh, appears to be properly used to signify, "To be truly contrite." In this View the Climax, Fer.31.19. will appear proper; "After that I was converted, I repented; "and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my "Thigh". And the Phrase again implies the utmost Concern and Contrition, Ezek.21.12. in so obvious a Manner, that perhaps very sew would vious a Manner, that perhaps very few would think it proper to vary the Hebrew Phrase, in Order to render it more intelligible.

13. To wax fat, or, To be covered with Fatnefs, fignify not only, that Luxuriance of Health and Prosperity, which is too commonly attended with prosane Haughtiness; but also, the Indulgence of the Appetites of the Flesh, with a Disregard to the Duties or Doctrines of Religion; as will appear by producing a few of the Passages where these Phrases are used. Deut. 32.15. "Je-

N 3 " Burun "Therewe waxed fat and kicked: thou art grown "thick, thou art covered with Fatness: then he "forfook God which made him, &c." — Job, 15.27. "Trouble and Anguish shall make the "wicked Man afraid; because he covereth his "Face with Fatness; &c."—Pfal.17.10. "They are inclosed in their own Fat, and their Mouth speaketh proud Things." — Jer. 5.28. "They are waxen fat, they shine; yea, they overpass "the Deeds of the Wicked; &c." — See Deut. 31.20. Pfal.73.7. Isa.6.10. What is said relating to this, Pfal.119.70. is very improperly rendered in our former Version, "Their Heart is as fat as Brawn." Ist, Because Swine's Flesh not being eaten among the Jews, they could have no Knowledge of Brawn; nor is there a Word in their Language to express it. And 2dly, Because, the Word way being only used in this Place, and a spriac Versions; "Their Heart is curdled like "Milk," i. e. grown four and disagreeable: Or, if the Word means coagulated, it may express their Insensibility, or Stupesaction. Infensibility, or Stupefaction.

Infensibility, or Stupefaction.

14. To say that a Man had a sure House built, to whom God was pleased to give a great Name, and a numerous, lasting, and illustrious Posterity, is a very proper and significant Phrase, 1 Sam. 2.

35.—25.28. 1 Kin.11.38. And it will convey its true Meaning to attentive Readers; but will not always so well admit a literal Translation into our Language; wherein to say, built up, or prospered their Families, would be more intelligible: For, when it is said, Exod.1.21. that, "because the Midwives feared God, God built them " Houses,"

" Houses," the Commentators have either found Room, or taken the Liberty, to put different Constructions upon the Words; and an ignorant Per-fon may not rightly apprehend the Meaning of them. -The Translators have varied the Phrase, Gen. 16.2. and faid, "Go in unto my Maid, that "I may obtain Children by her;" where the Hebrew is literally " That I may be builded by her." And the same Alteration is made, Gen. 30.3. And they might, very properly, have been made in the same, or such like Manner, 2 Sam. 7.11,27. where the building of David's House is spoken of by the Prophet Nathan; &c. - The Phrase, indeed, cannot easily be misinterpreted, where a Man was ordered to take his Brother's Wife, if he had died Childless, that he might build up his Brother's House. See Deut. 25. 9. Ruth, 4.11. 1 Chron. 17. 10, 25. Yet I think the Words much more properly rendered, when it is said, "raise up seed "unto his Brother." See, Mat. 22. 24. Mark, 12. 19. Luke, 20.28.

what is seasoned therewith, a Covenant, that was to be durable, appears to have been called, a Covenant of Salt; and, in those Terms such a Covenant is mentioned, Numb. 18.19. 1 Chro. 13.5. Where it evidently refers to what, in other Places, is called a perpetual, or an everlasting Covenant. No such Phrase being used amongst us, had the Meaning of the Words been more obvious than it generally is, the literal rendering of it would scarcely have been thought altogether suitable to the English Idiom.

Amongst many other rem rkab'e Curiosities, which have been pretended to have been discovered in the Holy Land, the Pillar of Salt, into which Lot's Wife is said to have been turned, Gen. 19.26. hath not escaped the Notice, or Ingenuity, of some Travellers. Yet I am persuaded, that a Pillar of Salt, there, means no more than an hard, durable, Pillar of Stone, that was to remain as a Monument to after Times.

16. To give a Nail, or a Pin, as the Phrase is translated, Ezra, 9.8. fignises, To give a Settlement, or a sure Abode: And, in that Sense must Isa.22.23. be understood, I will fasten him a Nail in a sure Place. But such uncommon Phrases had surely better be rendered in a more intelligible Manner.

17. How much that Phrase, used by Zipporab to Moses, Exod. 4. 25, 26. Surely a bloody Husband art thou unto me, hath been misunderstood, by several Expositors and Commentators, is shewn at large by the learned Mr. Mede, Discourse 14. And his Opinion hath been adopted by the Authors of the Universal History, Vol. 3. p. 365. who render the Words, "Thou art now to me a joyful circumcised "Son." Though no literal Version of the Words could convey any such Idea to an English Reader.

18. Him that is shut up, and left in Israel, is a Phrase repeated, 1 Kin. 4.10. — 21.21. and 2 Kin. 9.8. From the Context in these Passages, I should imagine it to mean, Both great and small: as 713y appears to signify, a Man of Power and Authority: Neb. 6.10. And 71y To disregard, 2 Chron. 10.8. Though the Phrase seems to be more extensive, and to include not only, great and small; but also young and old; good and evil; in Deut. 32.36. and 2 Kin. 14.26.

19. It

19. It is faid 2 Sam. 8.13. that David gat him a Name, when he returned from smiting the Syrians, www; which I apprehend to mean, that he erected a Trophy, as a Monument of the Victory. Thus, in the Proposal of building the Tower of Babel, Gen. 11.4. the Men said one to another, "Let us make us a Name." q. d. Let us erect a lasting Monument for ourselves. — Isa. 55.13. It shall be to the Lord for a Name, signifies, for a Memorial. And, Name is to be taken in the same Sense, Isa. 66. 5. And as the Greek Words σημα and σημείον are very probably thought to be derived from the Hebrew w, this strongly confirms the Opinion, that That Word was understood to signify a Trophy, Signal, or Memorial.

means, To be gathered unto his People, means, To be admitted into the Region, where the Souls of the Righteous sojourn: And that the opposite Phrase, To be cut off from his People, signifies The being excluded that happy Place, I have endeavoured to shew at large, in the Sermon above refer'd to § xxiv. when I was considering the Passages in Moses and the Prophets, which are expressive of Eternal Life.

The Consideration of the Phrases above mentioned, though but sew amongst those that are observable in the Hebrew Writings, will give the Reader an Opportunity of judging, whether it would not render a Version more intelligible to the more ignorant Part of Mankind, to give them such a Turn, as might readily convey the Idea intended by them, rather than, by a literal Translation, leave the Sense of them obscure, to all but those who are well acquainted with the Hebrew Idioms of Speech.

SECTION XXXIV.

As the Writers of the New Testament had been so long used to the Hebrew Idioms of Speech, and to the appropriated, as well as to the common Senses of the Words of that Language, we can, by no Means, wonder to find, that when they used a Greek Word, as correspondent to an Hebrew one of the like Signification, they used it, as the Hebrew Word was used, in either a common or appropriated Sense, as they found Occasion: And as this was really the Case, several of the Expressions made Use of in the New Testament, cannot otherwise be well explained, than by comparing them with the corresponding Passages of the Old: And this must occasion a Difficulty of rightly understanding several Passages, to those who are unacquainted with the particular Appropriations of Hebrew Words, and the Idioms of that Language.

1. That yr signifies to regard, and to ap-

1. That yr fignifies to regard, and to approve, as well as to know, cannot have escaped the Notice of any Hebrew Reader: And it must be obvious, that when it is rendered, to know, Psal. 1.6. and several other Places, it is to be understood in that Sense: But I have not observed, that any Greek Authors, except the Writers of the New Testament, use the Word ywwoxw in that Sense: From thence, however, our Translators have properly rendered Rom. 7.15. "For that "which I do, I allow not;" where the Vulgate hath non intelligo: yet, in a French Version it is je n' approuve; and in the Italian, Io non appruovo.—In this Sense must Mat. 7.23. be understood, "then will I profess unto them, I never knew "you," And I Cor. 8.3. "If any Man love God, "the

"the same is known of him." In the same Manner, and for the same Reason $\epsilon i \delta \omega$ seems to be used in the like Sense 2 Thes. 1.8. "In slaming "Fire taking Vengeance on them that know not "God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord"

" Jesus Christ."

2. The Hebrew ענה, which signifies to answer, was used also to express, A Man's uttering a Sentence, or, beginning a Discourse. This is so evident, that our Translators have not rendered fob, 3.2. "Job answered; but Job spake, and said." This Observation will remove any little Objections against the Propriety of the Writings of the New Testament, because αποκρινομαι is made Use of, where there was no previous Question; see Mat. 11.25. — 17.4. — 22.1. — 26.63. — 28.5. Mark 9.5. — 11.14. — 12.35. Luke 14.5. In these, and many other Places, the Translators might be at Liberty to render the Word, Jesus spake, and said; or Peter spake, and said; instead of answered; as they have translated ינה in the Passage above mentioned. And, here it may be observed, that when Jesus is said to answer, an Ellipsis is sometimes plainly intimated; as when Jesus answered the Jews, John, 5.17. "My Fa-"ther worketh hitherto, and I work;" we are given to understand, that they not only sought to flay him; but had also made Objections to his healing upon the Sabbath Day; as they had done, upon the like Occasion, at other Times.

3. The general Signification of the Hebrew Verb מכר is, to sell: but it sometimes signifies to give, or deliver up, without a Price; or To give: one's-self up to: as Judg. 2.14. " The Lord sold "his People into the Hands of their Enemies."

And Judg. 3.8. and 4.2, 9, &c. And 1 Kin. 21. 25. we are told, that "There was none like unto "Abab, who did fell himself to work Wickedness" in the Sight of the Lord." — 2 Kin. 17.17. "They fold themselves to do Evil." Now as with pask was the Word, by which Is is commonly rendered in the Septuagint, the Apostle uses it in the same Sense as the Hebrew Writers did the other, Rom. 7.14. "I am carnal, fold under "Sin." But as the English Verb to sell, hath not properly such a Latitude, Given up to Sin, would be the more intelligible to all Persons; and the Idiom of our Language seems to require, that the Hebrew Verb should be so rendered in the Passages above refer'd to.

4. The Hebrew yow fignifies, not only To bear; but also To attend to, To understand, and To regard what is said. And, in the same extensive Sense is the Word and used used by the Writers of the New Testament. Matt. 17.5. "This is "my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; "Hear ye him." Acts, 3.23. "Every Soul that "will not bear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the People." Matt. 11.15. "He "that hath Ears to hear, let him bear. 13.9. "Luke, 8.8. &c." Upon which, it may not be improper to observe, that whenever this serious and solemn Exhortation was given by our Saviour, it was in Order deeply to impress upon the Minds of the Hearers and Readers of his Gospel the important Duties and Doctrines he was then delivering to Mankind. It would be unnecessary to multiply Instances, where To bear signifies, seriously to attend to; as I think it would be by no Means proper to alter the Translation in these Passages: And what is said may be sufficient to point out, to every Reader, the proper Use that may be made of duly considering the Import of the Word in the several Passages, where he meets with it.

5. That the Words of St. Paul, Gal. 1, 10. "Do I now perfuade Men, or God?" are not very clearly intelligible, is evident from the Variety of Constructions which Commentators have put upon them: But, when it is observed, that שנוּם is the Word by which the 70 have commonly rendered the Hebrew מבטח, we may, not improbably, conclude, that the Apostle here uses it in the same Sense; and that, therefore, the proper rendering of it here would be, "Do I now " put my Considence in Men, or in God?" And, when we have considered it in this View, the Context will, I think, confirm this to be the undoubted Meaning of the Word in this Place. The Word $\pi \epsilon i \theta \omega$ is thus properly rendered, Matt. 27.43. " He trusted in God." See Mark, 10.24. Luke, 11.22. &c. And though the Particle swimay, in these Passages, ascertain the Meaning of the Word, without having any Recourse to the Use of it in the 70 Version; yet, when we meet with εωειθονλο αυλω, Acts, 5.36. and find, that the Translators have rendered it, "as many as obeyed "him;" as also y, 37. (where it would be more proper to fay, as many as put Confidence in him;) this confirms, that the Apostles used ωειθω in the Sense of Δοι. See 2 Cor. 10.7. and Phil. 1.6. ωεωοιθως αυρο τερο is exactly correspondent to the Passage first mentioned; "Being consident of, or " putting Confidence in, this very Thing; &c.
6. The Translators were not fully satisfied in the Version of Heb. 2.16. In the Text we read,

" He took not on him the Nature of Angels, but "he took on him the Seed of Abraham." And, in the Margin, "He taketh not Hold of Angels," but of the Seed of Abraham he taketh Hold." Now, The Nature of, in the allowed Text of our Version, is confessed to be wanting in the Original: The Verb is Εωιλαμβανείαι, which frequently signifies, To take Hold of with the Hand; as Matt. 14.31. Luke, 9.47. &c. But for rendering it, He took not on him, I fee no Grounds. Ewidau-Cανω is frequently, in the 70, the Translation of רווק: Now, though the general Sense of that Word be, To be strong, or valiant; yet it also signifies, To recover; Ija. 39. 1. And, To relieve, or Support; Lev. 25. 35. And, To repair; 2 Kin. 22.6. And, if the Greek Verb may be supposed to be here used in this Sense, the Assertion of the Apostle will appear to be, "That Christ recovered " not the fallen Angels from their accursed State; "but he recovered the Seed of Abraham; and "made all those who should walk in the Steps of their Father Abraham, capable of being Par"takers of the Inheritance of the Saints in "Light; by making Reconciliation for the Sins " of the People."

7. It hath been particularly observed, § XXI. that the Hebrew Tenses are very indiscriminately used for each other: And that may be an Apology for the Writers of the New Testament, who have sometimes taken the same Liberty, and used the perfect instead of the imperfect Tenses. Thus, John, 13.1. εληλυθεν η ωρα, when his Hour was come, fignifies when the Time was coming on, or not far distant, that he should depart out of this World. So Luke, 15.20. ηλθε fignifies was going to, in the same Manner as En sometimes signifies coming to, and fometimes going to.

8. To loose the Pains of Death, is scarcely a proper Expression, AEIs, 2. 24. but it is the literal Translation of the Greek. And when seems to be used by the Apostle in the same Sense with the Hebrew בתל But then, as it is observed by Beza and Doddridge, that Word fignifies both Pains and Bands: And it is above 30 Times translated by σποινίον and σποινίσμα in the 70.

9. As we have observed in § XXI. 3. That the Future Tense was frequently substituted to express the Sense of the Subjunctive, Optative, and Potential Moods; so we may take Notice, that this is also done by the Writers of the New Testament; and it will be allowed, that the Evangelist's Meaning, Mark, 8.36. is, "What can it profit a "Man, if he should gain the whole Word, and "lose his own Soul?" And I think, Dr. Doddridge hath given sufficient Reasons for rendering, Acts, 3.19, 20. "That Seasons of Refreshment may " come from the Presence of the Lord; and that "he may send unto you Jesus Christ."

10. We have observed in § XXVII. 1. That the Words יהוה and אלהים are made Use of to express the highest Degree of the Superlative. And it is, probably, upon that Account, and in that View, that the Apostle, 2 Cor. 10.4. mentions οωλα δυναζα τω θεω; Not, that the Weapons of our Warfare are mighty through God, as in our Version; nor mighty to God, as in the Margin; but, that they are exceeding powerful. Again; it is said of Moses, Acts, 7.20. that he was as E105 Tw Dew, which our Translators have rendered exceeding fair, which is furely much more proper than the the gratus Deo of the Vulgate: Yet in the Italian Version, I cannot but think it most happily expressed fu divinamente bello; especially as this appears to be a Comment upon Exod. 2.2. where it is said, That he was a goodly Child; and, as Josephus tells us, that "Moses was so remarkably "beautiful, that he engaged the particular Attention of all who saw him." Ant. Lib. 2.

Cap. 5.

These Instances are sufficient to point out, to the learned Reader, the proper Use that may be made of consulting the 70 Version, and taking into Consideration the Import of the Hebrew Words, which they rendered by such as the Writers of the New Testament afterwards made Use of in the same Sense and Latitude. And now, I shall humbly submit these Remarks to the Judgment of the Public: conscious to myself of the Want of several Abilities and Opportunities, that would be requisite for executing such a Plan in the most proper and masterly Manner: But, hoping that there will appear, at least, a true Zeal for the Honour of God's Holy Word; and a well-meant Design, and Endeavour, of opening Men's Eyes, that they may the better understand the Scriptures.

The Two General Remarks are,

I. THAT the present Masorete Copy of the Old Testament is, in many Places, different from the original Hebrew Text: and, That the Variations are frequently capable of being discover'd, in such a Manner, as to give us an Opportunity of restoring it to its primitive Purity.

II. That many of the Improprieties, Obscurities, and Inconsistencies, which occur to an attentive Reader of any of the Versions, are occasioned by the Translators misunderstanding the true Import of the Hebrew Words and Phrases.

Contents of the several Sections.

- I.THE original Text was entirely correct, and confistent in all its Parts: But
- II. Was, like other Books, liable to the Mistakes and Errors of Transcribers.
- III. The proper Means to be made Use of in reforming such Errors.
 - IV. An Apology for these Remarks.
 - V. Observations upon the Points and Keris.
- VI. The fimilar Form of several Hebrew Letters, made them very liable to be mistaken for each other.
- VII. Orthography not preserv'd in the Names of Persons and Places.
- VIII. Letters changed, added, and omitted, in feveral other Words.
- IX. Words fo changed as to introduce Inconfiftencies, Improbabilities, and Contradictions.
- X. Several Words omitted, which were in the original Copies.
- XI. Several Words added, which were not there.
- XII. Several Instances of Changes and Alterations in Sentences and Paragraphs.
 - XIII. Sentences and Paragraphs omitted.
 - XIV. Sentences and Paragraphs added.

On the Second General Remark.

XV. Many Passages necessarily obscure, in fuch antient Writings as those of Moses and the Prophets.

XVI. The true Sense of Words that are but once, or very rarely used, difficult to be ascertained.

XVII. Several of the Beafts, Birds, Fishes, \ n Te gala Trees, Plants, precious Stones, and musical Instruments, mention'd in Scripture, are unknown to us, or cannot be precisely distinguished.

XVIII. Allusions to antient Customs and Manners frequently cause Obscurity.

XIX. The Hebrew Language abounds in Expletives, which might be omitted in a Version.

XX. The Relatives not always apply'd to the Antecedent immediately foregoing, in the Language of Scripture.

XXI. The feveral Tenses and Conjugations of the Hebrew Verbs have not very precise Significations, but are used indiscriminately.

XXII. General Words and Expressions, as in other Languages, frequently admit of, and require Limitations.

XXIII. The Words that are become obsolete, or were not most properly chosen, should be alter'd in a New Translation.

XXIV. The general and appropriated Senses. of the Hebrew Words are not duly diftinguish'd by our Translators.

CONTENTS.

XXV. The Hebrew Words are used with much greater Propriety and Precision, than hath been commonly imagined.

XXVI. The proper Names of Places are frequently consider'd as Appellatives.

XXVII. Some Errors pointed out, which arise from mistaking the true Sense of equivocal Words.

XXVIII. The Formatives of some quiescent Verbs may be deduc'd from different Radixes than the Translators suppos'd them to be.

XXIX. Words of the fame Form are different Parts of Speech, and the Sense the Author used them in may be mistaken.

XXX. Words of Connexion, or for Illustration, fometimes improperly inferted by the Tran-flators.

XXXI. The general and common Signification of Hebrew Words, not sufficiently regarded and preserved in the Versions.

XXXII. Stops improperly placed in the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures, and the Versions.

XXXIII. The proper Import of the Hebrew Phrases not duly express'd by the Translators.

XXXIV. The true Meaning of many Words and Passages in the New Testament, is only to be discover'd by our consulting the Greek Version of the Old Testament, and the Hebrew Scriptures.
